Federal Reserve Advises Everybody Bought Russia Answers the Pope Poor Gentle Gandhi

—By Arthur Brisbane—

LOS ANGELES, March 21—The Federal Reserve chief tells business to go ahead boldly, showing more initiative, less hesitancy.

Excellent advice. Business will advise the Federal Reserve, when and if prosperity booms again, to be less enthusiastic about promoting usury, and run the Federal Reserve less like a pawnshop.

Reserve board financiers that forced 15 and 20 per cent interest rates, handing hundreds of millions to money lenders and adding billions in value, temporarily, to inflated bank stocks, need advice as much as any business man needs it.

Los Angeles oil-scandal-bribery case seems to have been a complete job. One lady on the jury confesses that she was promised $20,000. A male juror admits that interested parties bought his house for about twice what he paid for it. But he never thought of corruption. Other jurors were bought or "got" in other ways. But to make doubly sure, those accused bought the district attorney, and he, for a wonder, is in jail.

The good people of Los Angeles were spending thousands on the law suit, trying to punish crime and get justice for those swindled in the oil robbery. And the accused sat before a partly bought jury, with an entirely bought district attorney prosecuting.

Joseph Topolitzky, student of modern conditions, says, "If a man is guilty, he should go into court, since he is quite sure to win. But if he is innocent, he should make the best settlement he can, he could not have much of a chance in court."

Russia, inflamed by the Pope's protest against atheistic propaganda, retaliates, in vindictive fashion. In the Veronesh district a fund is started to build an airplane, presumably for war, to be called "Our Answer to Pope Pius." And from the Veronesh district, workers send to the industrial fund at Moscow ten carloads of church bells, sacred images, crucifixes, etc., to be melted down. That shipment is called "an answer to the Pope."

Once, such a service as that held in St. Peter's by the Pope, answered in such fashion by Russia, would have started a crusade against the Russian government. The masses move more slowly now, but there is no doubt that Russia is building up ill will, most foolishly, not only abroad, but more particularly among her own people.

Poor, gentle, sincere Gandhi, leader of the Hindu rebellion, continues his pathetic march to the sea. His plan is to manufacture salt without paying the usual tax and see what Britain does. He tells his followers, "If you are sent to prison, go piously; if assaulted, bear it cheerfully; if shot, die peacefully."

That accords with our Christian "turn the other cheek" command, but it is not the program of victory, not the method that has secured freedom for the oppressed, in America, France, Russia or anywhere.

Golf links, daily dozens, radio setting up exercises and other devices are designed for the man who leads a sedentary life PHYSICALLY.

Edison wants to know: "What about the man mentally sedentary and inactive. Who will plan something for him?" Many millions need to be called early on the radio with this question: "How long is it since you exercised your mind. How much reading worth while do you do, and how much do you think as you read?" It is mental, not physical, inactivity that hurts a nation.

Mrs. Ella A. Boole of Brooklyn, president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, is not worried about prohibition. She says the Eighteenth Amendment, giving ice water to men, will stay in the Constitution as long as the Nineteenth Amendment giving votes to women.

Prohibition, in the Constitution, will undoubtedly outlive this century, barring a workers' revolution, which won't come. But souvent femme varie, "often woman changes her mind," is true, and women themselves may change laws made to enforce and interpret the Eighteenth Amendment. They may say that half of 1 per cent alcohol is too much, or decide that beer used by many, temperately, and wine, made by divine miracle for the marriage feast, may be used.

New Zealand women were as ardent for prohibition as Mrs Boole, and they closed all the saloons. After they had lived with their husbands for a while, each husband with a bottle un-

CROWLEY OPENS DRIVE ON CRIME

E. L. DOHENY ACQUITTED OF BRIBERY

Dramatic Scenes Follow Verdict Vindicating a $100,000 "Loan" to Fall After Lease

Washington, March 22 (INS)—Edward L. Doheny was acquitted today of the charge of bribing Albert B. Fall to lease to Doheny interests the government oil reserve at Elk Hills Cal.

"Not guilty" was the verdict of a jury of nine men and three women, who had heard the government accuse the white haired multimillionaire of bribing Fall with $100,000 in cash on Nov. 30, 1921, and Doheny's defense that it was "merely a loan from one old friend to another."

The jury was out only one hour and eight minutes and took only one ballot.

Fall was convicted last autumn by another jury of having accepted the $100,000 as a bribe. Today's jury took the opposite view, deciding the $100,000 was a loan.

Justice Hits in his charge to the jury ruled that it would be possible to find Doheny not guilty of bribery even though Fall had been convicted of receiving the $100,000 as a bribe.

Dramatic scenes followed Doheny's acquittal. Justice Hitz thanked the jurors for their service and left the bench.

WOMEN KISS DOHENY.

Mrs. Doheny pushed herself inside the rail and embraced her husband. With tears streaming down their cheeks the two stepped to the jury box and thanked each man and woman of the panel.

Doheny said he had been confident of acquittal from the start. He and his wife were then hidden from view as jubilant friends crowded about them.

One of Doheny's associates exclaimed, "We told you your day was coming, and this is it."

Mrs. Doheny answered: "I knew it would when we came to court."

Mrs. Doheny said she had "no idea" when they would go home, adding, "I don't care now."

Mrs. Frank Hogan, wife of defense counsel, who sat beside Mrs. Doheny throughout the trial, also burst into tears as the verdict was announced.

As a line formed and filed by Doheny several women kissed him on the cheek.

Two women members of the jury were among those who clasped the

DE VALERA IN A TILT WITH CURLEY

Mayor Says Leader's Policies Do Ireland No Good; Big Meeting Tomorrow

Eamonn DeValera, Irish Republican leader, today was told by Mayor James M. Curley that his policies are "destructive to the good of Ireland."

This unexpected development to the Hub visit of the noted leader, occurred during an official call upon the mayor at City Hall.

In the presence of the Boston reception committee of 15 members, the mayor good-naturedly but firmly told the visitor that he should abandon his "philosophy of destructive and constant opposition" to many projects in Ireland.

DeValera defended his policies as being "constructive," and did not take offense at the advice of the mayor.

CLASH OVER SHANNON

Even when the mayor contrasted DeValera with Von Hindenburg of Germany, to the credit of the German—the Irish leader seemed unperturbed.

"Please remember that I'm as sincere a booster of a progressive program of developing Ireland as anyone," the mayor continued as he talked with DeValera.

The point on which the two men most directly clashed was the great hydro-electric project in the Shannon river valley.

The mayor pointed out that this river development, would be "a wonderful thing for the industrial and commercial life of the nation."

WANTS UNITED IRELAND

"But it's a case of the British benefiting hugely," countered DeValera, "and at the expense of Ireland."

Mayor Curley replied to the effect that DeValera's "philosophy of de-

CLEANUP OF LIQUOR AND VICE DIVES ORDERED

Police Captains Told to Push Vigorous Crusade at Conference With Chief

Presumably as a result of utterances by Mayor Curley, a police cleanup of liquor and vice conditions throughout the city was ordered today.

For the first time in years five captains were called in the office of Police Supt. Michael H. Crowley at headquarters and told to start work at once, that the responsibility rested on them.

They were Capts. George W. Patterson of the headquarters liquor and vice squad, and formerly Oliver B. Garrett's superior; Arthur Bruce McConnell of Division 1, Hanover st.; John Mullen of Division 5, South End; Perley S. Skillings, Division 2, Milk st., and Jeremiah Sullivan, Division 10, Roxbury Crossing.

It was at first rumored they had been summoned in connection with Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner's investigation of Oliver B. Garrett, but this was denied by Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson.

TRANSFERS DENIED

He also denied rumors he planned to transfer several captains, either immediately or in the near future.

While no information was forthcoming from the superintendent's office, it was learned that plain clothes vice and liquor details will be organized in each division.

These details will make a survey of conditions and will make raids wherever the evidence warrants. It was also learned that the entire headquarters vice and liquor squad will be on duty tonight, with orders to make arrests wherever necessary.

The police action is believed to be a direct result of the interest taken by Mayor Curley in cleaning up conditions in the city. Speaking before the City Federation of Women's Clubs at the Y. W. C. A. he said: "There is something wrong with the police department in Boston."

He revealed that within 10 days he had held a conference with Dist. Atty. Foley, Commissioner Wilson and heads of other departments with a view toward steps to halt crime.

OTHERS TO BE CALLED

"The underworld element," he said, "is operating in Boston with a more than reasonable degree of safety."

It is understood that other captains will be called in headquarters and given instructions to weed out the crime spots from their districts, after a city-wide drive.

The fact that police officials are disturbed was evidenced by the assembly of captains. Ordinarily orders are distributed to them at their stations.

She was restrained with difficulty by firemen as the little house burned to the ground.

The father was at work and it was several hours before he was found and notified of the tragedy.

Chief of Police Andrew J. Toland said the fire probably started from an overheated stove.

The mother said she had locked the door of the house before she went out. The bodies of the three

While his friends danced with three pretty girls in a Harvard dormitory on the exclusive Gold Coast, following a Hasty Pudding Club show, Asge Klouman, 26, Harvard graduate, shot himself in the side early today.

Police said the shooting brought to a dramatic close a gay drinking and dancing party in Ridgeley Hall, Mt. Auburn st., in which Klouman, five students and three girls participated.

At the Phillips Brooks House of Massachusetts General Hospital, to which Klouman was transferred from Cambridge City Hospital, his name is on the danger list.

PROBERS SEEK HISTORY OF MYSTERY WOMAN IN GARRETT CASE comes their aid particularly with reference to the names of certain attorneys called to his attention in the investigation of he pensioned police liquor raider.

He elaborated upon his previous suggestion that members of the Bar Association seek the co-operation of their clients in helping to clean up Boston and a flood of useful information is expected as a result.

The attorney-general made the surprising announcement that the public hearings would not resume on Tuesday as originally planned.

"When will they resume?" he was asked.

"I can't say for sure, but I hope some day next week," he replied.

The postponement was believed an indication that the next step in his inquiry has not yet been completely outlined and that he wishes, upon resumption, to be prepared for any eventuality that may arise.

Whether it was upon advice of the bar association committee that he deferred public reopening of the case was not known.

OUTLINES THE TASK.

Those meeting with the Attorney-General and his aides were Thomas W. Proctor, committee chairman; Robert G. Dodge, James J. McCarthy, Alexander Lincoln, Samuel Hoar, Max S. Bernkopf, Robert Proctor and Daniel J. Lyne.

Warner outlined to the committee the major points in his search for the source of the Garretts' $122,959 fortune. These include the Ritz Hotel case, the State House liquor analysis scandal, the "Onlywon" pool, the state police probe of Garrett in 1928, the Garrett farm milk route and the activities of police and lawyers in connection with organized liquor and vice rings in Boston.

For impetus in his search for unethical practices by attorneys, Warner had before him Mayor Curley's statement of yesterday that "there are some lawyers who, with a safe blower as a client, will thieve for $5000, then tell him to go out and blow another safe and beat it."

CHEMIST SCANDAL.

After receiving a report to the effect that a high police official ordered the discharge of William Crawford, State chemist in liquor analysis in the health department, because "he knows too much," the attorney-general's aides today reopened their investigation in the liquor analysis at the State House last year.

Crawford, who was discharged for a violation of health rules after members of the Boston police squad charged that liquor samples had been tampered with, was again called to the office for questioning. Following reinstatement he was transferred to the water division of the state health department at Lawrence.

Today he was questioned again by Louris Jeremiasen C. Lythgoe, director of the division of food and drugs of the health department, will also be questioned and both will be called as witnesses when the hearings resume.

CALL COCKINOS AGAIN

Nicholas Cockinos and Albert K. Sidlinger, serving terms at Deer Island in the Ritz Hotel conspiracy, will be questioned again Monday by Asst. Atty.-Gen. Sawyer. Both have given important information relative to alleged police graft and vice conditions.

George A. Douglas, counsel for the Watch and Ward Agent Cockinos, at the conspiracy trial, has been one of the Ritz case with Lourie at a three-hour conference. He has visited his former client several times recently and Sidlinger has expressed the wish to appear as a witness at the investigation and tell all he knows with reference to vice conditions, the work of the liquor squad and the Ritz case, in which he, like Sidlinger, declares he was "framed."

He believes by telling all he knows he can vindicate himself.

A mystery woman, possibly two, loom as important links in the chain of evidence in the probe.

It became known today that apartment house owners and renting agents of Brighton and Brookline have been quizzed by investigators as to what they know of the comings and goings of a Vivian Rossi. Also a private hospital head was questioned as to her whereabouts.

Indications are that the attorney-general's investigators have been keeping the Rossi woman in the background for some time, as they have also a woman known as Lucy. Whether Lucy and Vivian Rossi are one and the same person is not clear.

Revelations of intimate dealings with Oliver B. Garrett and a suggestion that his conduct in certain matters be investigated are said to have been contained in a letter addressed to Warner by the mysterious Lucy. With the Legislature inserting an "immunity" clause in its new resolve authorizing the attorney-general's probe of Garrett's affairs, the woman may be induced to come forward and testify.

An operation performed upon Vivian Rossi at a Roxbury hospital last year may lead to information about her life history. She is said to have been known to a number of liquor squad members and to have resided for a time in the Back Bay district.

At one time she is reputed to have been a woman of affluence, residing in the Chestnut Hill section of Brookline, although the source of her income was unknown. Her name was linked with "Oliver Bridge" in a letter sent to a number of Boston banks which read:

"In connection with this investigation into the circumstances of a pension to Oliver B. Garrett, under authority of legislative resolve the attorney-general is desirous of procuring the following information from you:

"1—Whether or not there was any bank account either in the commercial department or the savings department of your bank in one of the following names, either individually or as trustee or agent—Oliver Bridge, Vivian Rossi.

"2—Whether or not a safe deposit box was rented in your bank to Oliver Bridge."

Sensational developments were hinted if the mystery woman is found, for she is believed to be one of that coterie designated by the attorney-general as "the little gang" of Garretts.

Stock Deals Quest in Garrett Probe Lists 34 Names

How many persons are represented in the list of names sent out by Atty.-Gen. Warner in his search for stock transactions in the Garrett inquiry is a mystery, although they are believed to number not more than 18. There are those similarities:

Nellie J. Patterson,
Nellie J. O'Connor,
Gertrude A. Bulfinch,
Gertrude Tiernan,
Gertrude Carlton,
Gertrude Foley.
Mae L. O'Brien,
Mae L. McGinnis.
Mae L. Feeley.
Mae L. Fales.

In addition, records are sought in the names of Oliver Bridge Garrett, Oliver Bridge, Daniel J. Hines, Elizabeth F. Hines, Thomas F. A. Daley, Bertha Daley, Vivian Rossi, Bertha J. Donovan, Bernard H. McGinnis, Arthur M. Tiernan, Dudley Mulrenin or Mulreanin, Annie M. Kane or Kaine, Florence Woodside, Florence Reden or Redden, Florence H. Reden or Redden, F. H. born, undergraduate, in Ridgeley Hall.

GIRLS AT GAY PARTY

Last night, with Hichborn and four other students, he attended the Hasty Pudding Show, and later the party met three girls, with whom they all returned to the dormitory.

Police say drinks were served, and dancing begun to the music of a phonograph.

In the midst of the party, police say Klouman retired to a bed room, and began shooting at the ceiling with a 22-caliber target pistol.

His companions remonstrated with him, on the ground that he was disturbing the party, and he agreed to stop the shooting, the police were told.

Later hearing moans coming from the bedroom the students investigated and found Klouman bleeding from a wound in his left side under the ribs.

ALL ARE QUESTIONED

The police were notified and an ambulance took Klouman to the City hospital, while the other members of the party were taken to the Brattle sq. station for questioning.

Klouman's statement and those of the others satisfied the police that no one else was involved, and the others were released, and their names withheld.

The wounded man was later transferred to Phillips Brooks House.

Sergt. Mulvaney of the Brattle sq. station, made the following report on the shooting to Chief of Police McBride:

"At 4.45 a.m. I received a tip to an ambulance to be sent to 65 Mt. Auburn st. Sent Sergt. Bradley and Officer Tim Foley and met ambulance of Station 2 and with Officers Temple and Gordon went to Buhl 34, occupied by Asge B. Klouman where a party was being staged and found him lying on a bed with a bullet wound in his left side."

He was taken to Municipal hospital and examined by Dr. Gorman and his name placed on the danger list. Headquarters and Capt. Jeremiah Galliver notified."

SEIZE THREE PISTOLS

Lieut. Joseph Shannon of the homicide squad is investigating.

Lieut. Shannon, with Inspectors Thomas Carroll and George Buchanan, visited the dormitory and took possession of three revolvers, including the target pistol with which the shooting was done.

They found a bullet hole in the bed, and another in the ceiling, which with Klouman's wound accounted for three shots fired from the pistol.

While they were questioning the wounded man at the City Hospital an attempt was made to move him, but was held up until the questioning was over.

The child's mother, Mrs. Helen Gavin, had gone to a doctor's office for treatment, leaving Dorothy and two other children in the care of their aunt, Mrs. Dorothy Fallon.

Mrs. Fallon wrapped a blanket about the child, extinguishing the flames, but not before Dorothy had received second and third degree burns.

Capt. Jeremiah Galliver of Station 10 said that the fire had probably been started by matches, as one was found under the couch on which Dorothy had been lying.

RUSH TROOPS TO AID PRIESTS IN CHINA SIEGE

Rev. James Corbett and 2 Boston Nuns Among the 11 Missionaries in Peril at Hanchow

Word of the fate of 11 American Catholic missionaries reported besieged by Chinese Communists at Kanchow was anxiously awaited today at Boston, former home of a priest and of three of the nuns imperiled.

The State Department at Washington reported it had been advised that a detachment of Chinese government troops had been sent to the relief of the besieged missionaries, headed by Bishop J. A. O'Shea of Deep River, Ct.

One of the priests endangered is the Rev. James Corbett, brother of Arthur Corbett, secretary to Mayor Curley. Fr. Corbett was last heard from in a letter received a couple of weeks ago at his home, 53 Chelmsford st., Dorchester.

PLANNING FURLOUGH.

He was preparing to return on a furlough after six and a half years as pastor at Kanchow, where he directed the building of a hospital to care for 4000 patients.

He celebrated his first public mass in St. Matthew's Church, on Stanton st., Dorchester, after being ordained in Philadelphia. He went to St. Peter's school in Dorchester and attended Niagara University, and studied for the priesthood there and at the Vincentian headquarters at Germantown, Pa.

News of his danger is being kept from his mother, Mrs. Mary Corbett, as she has been ill for the past week.

NUNS IMPERILED.

Sister Vincent Louise DeLude, one of the trapped missionaries, was a nurse at Carney Hospital in South Boston, although her family lives in Detroit. She left as one of the Vincentian missionaries to China a year and a half ago, with Sister Anselma Jarboe, formerly of Washington, but later superintendent of nurses at St. Margaret's hospital, Dorchester.

Sister Vincent Louise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. DeLude of Detroit, has been in the Vincentian Order about eight years. Letters from her head arrived at Carney Hospital and she was last heard from two weeks ago.

Sister Anselma Jarabo, formerly of Washington, D. C., and until recently superintendent of nurses at St. Margaret's hospital, Dorchester, is also in a danger area in China.

She is at Kiang Si mission. She was at St. Margaret's hospital for six years as registrar and superintendent.

A letter telling of unrest and dangerous conditions with rebels so near that one had reached her since just before Christmas, was received from her a week ago.

The letter, dispatched, revealing that Bishop O'Shea had sent three appeals for aid since December 1, advised that all missionaries be withdrawn at once from the Kanchow area.

Advice regarding the dispatch of Chinese troops to relief of the little party was received by the American legation at Peiping.

DOHENY FREED OF 'BRIBERY'

hands of Mr. and Mrs. Doheny as they stood side by side leaning against a railing around the bench.

POSE FOR CAMERAMEN

Attorney Fegan, who also had been surrounded by friends, finally pushed his way through the crowd, slapping Doheny on the shoulder, said, "Well, we won it."

Doheny, with tears still in his eyes, grasped Fegan's hand and shook it. They chatted for several minutes before leaving the courtroom to pose for photographers.

The jury's decision leaves Fall, secretary of the interior in the Harding administration, the only person convicted of charges growing out of the oil leases proper, though Harry F. Sinclair served a jail sentence for refusing to answer questions asked by a senate committee and for criminal contempt of court.

The Doheny charge was the last of six indictments returned by a grand jury as a result of the oil leasing policies of Fall and ends the criminal prosecutions unless Fall wins a new trial.

Demonstrates "Injustice to Fall," Says His Wife

El Paso, Tex., March 22 (AP)—Mrs. Albert B. Fall, wife of the former secretary of the interior, said today the acquittal of Edward L. Doheny of a charge of bribery in the Elk Hills naval oil lease was a "splendid vindication that surely will call to the attention of the entire world the terrible injustice done Mr. Fall and his family."

Mrs. Fall said her husband was writing a statement to be issued later today.

New York, March 22—When a man has been to the South Pole for a long, long time, he's liable to be at least surprised, and maybe shocked, at the changes in feminine styles. But Sir Hubert Wilkins is extremely pleased at the return of the long skirt.

"Outside of the pleasure of tasting American food again," the noted explorer declared, "I got my biggest thrill when Lady Wilkins appeared in one of the new frocks with a skirt that looked like the skirts I used to know."

Two Way Radio Talks Easy, Marconi Finds

Genoa, Italy, March 22—Two-way radio conversations between North America and Latin America will be of ordinary and daily occurrence if the present plans of Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of the wireless, are perfected.

He announces this, today, following the successful establishment of two way conversation between himself and friends in Sydney, Australia.

The eminent scientist states that contact with the "land down under" was made with comparative ease, and that reception on both ends was clear and strong, each party being heard most distinctly for an extended period.

'Worship the Cook,' Advises Miss Bonfield

London, March 22—Margaret Bonfield, England's first woman Cabinet minister, has confessed that at the age of 37 she cannot cook.

She says she never found time to learn the art completely during a prominence, which lasted from the shop-girl days of her early teens until her appointment to the Labor ministry.

This ignorance of the age-old feminine art is one of her greatest regrets.

"We should go down on our knees to the women who prepared food in varying and appetizing ways," she said.

DE VALERA AND CURLEY CLASH

structive and constant opposition" to projects for the advancement of Ireland, would never accomplish anything.

The mayor urged a constructive policy of bringing all of Ireland into a united group working for the common good.

"Not until then," predicted the mayor, "will the world really recognize Ireland's worth."

Von Hindenburg, according to Curley, at the outset dropped all old policies and factional disputes and worked to rebuild the new Germany.

DeValera informed Curley that "My policies are not so destructive as you think. I'm really trying to bring about a united Ireland."

SIGNS IN GAELIC

After the cigar smoke of the diplomatic "battle" had cleared, the two men posed together for a photograph and shook hands.

As he left the office, DeValera scrawled his name in the guest book with two lines of Gaelic.

Translated, the lines read:

"Beyond all telling is the destiny that God has in mind for Erin, the Peerless."

DeValera will depart Sunday night for Pittsburgh for a meeting similar to the Boston one.

He was met at Back Bay station by an excellent representation of the many friends he has made in Boston during previous visits. He went at once to the State House where he was greeted by Atty.-Gen. Joseph F. Warner, representing Governor Allen.

BOSTON BEHIND QUOTA

He outlined briefly the needs for an Irish newspaper in the interests of which he has toured the United States, raising funds. He will elaborate upon these needs tomorrow night at Symphony Hall.

Despite oversubscription of funds for the paper, to be called The Irish Press, Ltd., Boston's quota of $75,000 is undersubscribed by $20,000, he said.

Among those gathered at Back Bay station to greet him were Dan Tynan, Dr. James T. Gallagher, William H. O'Brien, Christopher J. Fitzgerald, Jeremiah Carroll, John B. O'Connor and Dennis O'Leary.

In his suite at the Copley-Plaza, DeValera discussed political and economic issues in Ireland. He said Ireland is staggering under an excessive tax burden, and analyzed a total of $26,000,000 which is paid annually to the British treasury. These payments, he said, include:

Repayment to the Crown of compensation awarded Irish citizens for property damages caused by the Black and Tans in repressing the 1918-1921 revolution.

Repayment to Britain of pensions for retired British judges, civil service and policemen serving in Ireland under the crown.

STATE ASKS DEATH PENALTY FOR INDIAN GIRL IN WITCH MURDER

MOTIVE SAME AS IN SNYDER-GRAY CASE

Infatuated Woman Plotted the Slaying of Artist's Wife, Says District Attorney

Copyright, 1930, by International News Service.

Buffalo, March 22 (INS)—"I am going to ask the jury to send Lila Jimerson to the electric chair.

"This is another Snyder-Gray case, with reverse English. Ruth Snyder used a man as her dupe to commit murder. Lila Jimerson inspired a woman to the same act."

Dist. Atty. Guy B. Moore, who is prosecuting Miss Jimerson, 35-year-old Indian woman, for the murder of Mrs. Clothilde Marchand, wife of Henri Marchand, famous artist and sculptor, made these assertions today as he outlined his case for International News Service. The dark-eyed Lila is accused of having inspired Nancy Bowen, a 66-year-old Indian woman, to beat Mrs. Marchand to death. Lila had posed for Marchand and was infatuated with him.

Dist. Atty. Moore hopes to complete the jury Monday.

INFATUATION MOTIVE

"The motive for the crime," says the prosecutor, "was the infatuation of this Indian woman, Lila, for the artist, Marchand. Their affair had reached the point where Lila figured she would eventually marry him in spite of her Indian blood.

"Lila has a crafty, cunning mind. The evidence against her is conclusive. She admits she wrote letters purporting to be signed by a medium, a Mrs. Dooley, and by this means she filled the superstitious mind of Nancy Bowen with the idea of doing away with Mrs. Marchand.

"She persuaded Mrs. Bowen to believe Mrs. Marchand was a witch, that the artist's wife had hexed her husband, Sassafras Charlie, and was responsible for his death. Mrs. Bowen was led to believe that Mrs. Marchand would do the same thing to her if she was not done away with.

CAREFULLY PLOTTED

"Lila advised Nancy as to the methods to be employed in the murder, she advised her after the killing, she provided Nancy with the chloroform, she bought the hammer with which Mrs. Marchand was killed. She warned Mrs. Bowen to get the police dog out of the Marchand home before she committed the crime. It was a cold, deliberate plot."

"I grilled Lila for hours," Dist. Atty. Moore continued. "She insisted she had nothing to do with the crime, that she knew nothing about it. She did admit, however, that she bought the hammer.

"I grilled Marchand, too. He declared he had no knowledge of any plan to do away with his wife. He insisted that while he had an affair with Lila he always had loved his wife and no one else. He professed to be broken up over his wife's death.

"Lila and Mrs. Bowen had worked a ouija board together on occasions. Lila said she did not believe in witchcraft. The old woman, Nancy, believes firmly in witches, spirits and such things."

His journey to Spain with the money, which Mexican officials charged, was loot taken by the rebels from a bank in Torreon and the Chihuahua State Treasury, was interrupted by arrests at Kansas City and New York. The request for his extradition was denied in New York.

The fortune which he brought out of Mexico was the subject of litigation in New York. But the money finally was returned to Ateca.

There was no pageantry and no ceremonial. Balfour had expressed the wish that the last services be unpretentious. So, while the nation honored the statesman's memory in Westminister Abbey and St. Giles Cathedral, Edinburgh, those at home placed him in his final resting place as a friend and neighbor Scottish laird beside the other members of his family.

U. S., BRITAIN DRAFT NAVAL TREATY

Pact American Envoys Took to London Used as Model; France-Italy Deadlocked

Washington, March 22 (AP)—Asserting outside the Senate chamber that he expected to show that "a lot of money is being spent and nothing accomplished," Senator Blease, Democrat, South Carolina, today introduced a resolution calling upon the State Department for a report on the expenses of the American delegation to the London naval conference.

London, March 22 (AP)—Pending word from the Japanese government regarding the tentative naval agreement worked out between the American and Japanese delegations, the Americans and British, it was said in authoritative circles, will go ahead in the preparation of a draft conference pact.

This is on the assumption that no break in the Franco-Italian parity deadlock develops.

The Americans and British plan to go ahead with the drafting and leave blank spaces where necessary for the Japanese to fill in later. Presumably France and Italy would be invited to sign this pact, but while there might be some clauses to which they could subscribe, it would be virtually a three-power agreemnet.

It is understood that it would follow the general lines of the Washington treaty.

Thus far it has been kept a secret, but it can now be said that the Americans brought the draft of a five-powey agreement to the conference with them.

It is unlikely that this will see the light of day in its present form owing to the Franco-Italian imbroglio, but it is said many parts of it will be useful in drafting another pact.

The drafting work is mainly a job for legal minds and it is understood that Ambassador Morrow and George Rublee, adviser on the American delegation, are likely to be prominent among the Americans on the drafting committee.

Paris, March 22 (AP)—The French naval delegation will negotiate to the last minute, it was declared in official circles today in reply to inquiry concerning rumors that Briand's return home meant an end to French efforts to reach an agreement.

Briand was obliged to come home to attend to matters of his ministry which have been neglected for four months. He will go back to London, it was said, as soon as he can finish his urgent matters here.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON BOSTON SOCIETY

Matrons and Debutantes Wear Brilliant Costumes

THE HASTY PUDDING CLUB costume ball was a merry affair and all of the princes and peasants, poets and Priscillas, pantaloons and pirates were in holiday mood. Many debs from out of town were spotted among the gay throng. One of the most beautiful costumes of the evening was worn by the recent bride-elect, Miss Evelyn Ingeborg Perkins, white satin brocade combined with silver lace and pearls, with Russian pearl headdress. She was accompanied by her fiance, Mr. Amyas Ames, who was also in Russian costume of yellow and black velvet, trimmed with fur. Petite Elizabeth Saltonstall was irresistible in a green and white checked pantaloon costume of the '80's; Eleanor Gibson shared honors with her for that period in Gibson girl attire with saucy sailor hat.

EVELYN AMES WAS DAINTY in a turquoise-blue dance dress with lace headdress; Ethel Grew was provocative in brown and beige Spanish costume, and her friend, Frances Burnett, was demure as a Dutch girl. Red Riding Hood attended in person of Catherine Brown. Betty Barrell made a bewitching Venetian lady in black tulle with silver lace and powdered wig. Mrs. James Lawrence, Mrs. Philip Dalton, Mrs. Roger Warner, Mrs. J. Harleston Parker and Mrs. John Hallowell were in the receiving line. Mrs. Lawrence is hostess for several out-of-town maidens. Miss Dorothy Kinnicutt of New York, who arrived in white satin with red pom-poms, and Miss Grace, a New York deb of this season, who was attired in cloth of silver with touches of blue. Dorothy Lawrence was charming as always, in green-checked gingham overalls. Gladys Bigelow wore a Spanish costume with black mantilla.

Miss Evelyn I. Perkins Amyas Ames

Miss Evelyn I. Perkins and Amyas Ames, whose engagement has just been announced, were among those who enjoyed the fancy dress ball of the Hasty Pudding Club last evening. Miss Perkins, whose home is in Hartford, was a lovely Russian princess. Mr. Ames wore a velvet Russian costume.

Minuet Feature of Senior Supper Dance

A MINUET, PERFORMED BY a group in period costume, was a feature of the last Senior Supper dance at the Copley-Plaza. Smart society was in happy mood and many beautiful evening gowns were worn. Mrs. Donald McElwain was very lovely in white net with silver stars, and a cascade of red roses over one shoulder. Mrs. Charles Codman appeared in black net with silver sequins. Mrs. Samuel Hoar, Jr., looked very charming in frosty green lace with crystals. Mrs. Thomas Proctor, 2nd, was stunning in red lace, and Miss Natalie Winslow was ravishing in rose-flowered taffeta. Garnet lace was most becoming to Mrs. Edward McNichol.

MRS. AUGUSTUS P. DOTT'S smile quite outshone her green moire, orchids and pearls. Among the petite matrons was Mrs. H. Stewart Stone in turquoise-blue satin, and Mrs. Maurran, from Providence, was smart in black net with gold stars and jade slippers. Silver lace graced Mrs. Thomas Cabot, and brown tulle set off Miss Louise Bazeley's black hair and creamy skin. An out-of-town guest was Mrs. Robert Cobb, who looked very regal in egg-shell moire. Mrs. Arthur Adams was dainty in an apricot moire, and Mrs. Sullivan Sargent, Jr.'s, egg-shell moire with pastel flowers was lovely.

Question of the Proper Skirt Length Is Now Settled

UP and down, our skirt lengths have see-sawed ever since Paris first thought of dropping her hemline below the knee. Everyone has had a different idea about the lengths to which skirts should go for sports, street, afternoon and formal occasions. The only length which has actually been agreed upon by the majority is that of very formal evening gowns—universally, they reach for the floor.

Women who had enjoyed the new freedom of sports clothes refused to yield to a hampering length when afield in golf or tennis. Still other chic women refused to appear upon the street in trailing lengths. What was to be done? It was evident that something definite had to be decided before spring laid her fashion cards on the table.

AT last it would seem that we have a measure for our hemlines—a defined length chart which you may safely follow when you set forth upon your spring clothes buying.

As the shadows of the day lengthen so will your skirts. To begin—all sports clothes will adhere to a 16-inch length from the floor. Travel costumes will drop their hems to 15 inches from the ground and street clothes will be smartest at a neat 14-inch length. These three lengths take care of the informal occasions of the day.

Now for more formal demands—the afternoon frock for general wear reaches about 12 inches from the floor whereas the restaurant or dancing frock fluctuates between 10 inches and ankle length. The most formal costumes of your wardrobe will, of course, reach the floor or trail slightly for very grand affairs.

Only Gowns for Those Formal Occasions Reach the Floor

THE gown pictured embodies length, a novelty peplum, and brilliantly buckled belt, as well as other high lighted points of fashion.

The color is "cafe au-lait," the material of the bodice portion is moire taffetas, the very full lower section, and wide shoulder straps of net in the same shade, the skirt edged with half-garlands of flowers formed of vari-hued ribbons. The silhouette of this gown is very new and youthful with its novelty circular ruffle finish ending in cut-away style some inches below the hips.

CAPONE SITS IN THE 'JINX CHAIR' AT CHICAGO POLICE QUARTERS

Scarface Declares He Won't Quit Town; a Bodyguard Escorts Him in Auto

Chicago, March 22 (INS)—Apparently unmoved by the police warning that he must get out of town, Aphonse "Scarface" Capone, reputed leader of Chicago's best known gang, returned to his desk today to attend his "business interests."

Strolling into the office of Deputy Police Commissioner John Stege, Capone made his first appearance since his release from Eastern Penitentiary, Philadelphia, last Monday. He had been sought by police continuously since his release.

"Here I am. Now what are you going to do about it?" was the attitude his words and demeanor spoke.

"I have no charge against you, but it will not be safe for you to hang around town, Al," Commissioner Stege told the gang leader who has been credited by authorities with some of Chicago's choicest underworld executions.

BODYGUARD ON JOB.

Capone arrived with his legal adviser, Thomas D. Nash. An khaki automobile drew up in front of police headquarters another automobile, containing three watchful men, stopped on the other side of the street. They looked carefully in all directions as the beer baron made his way into the building.

Capone always has a few bodyguards on the job.

"Chicago is my home," said Capone as he eyed the detective chief. "I shall return here after I have attended to some business in Florida."

To this, Stege warned his visitor that he would be arrested every time he is seen.

"I have some rights as a citizen and I'll sue for false arrest," Capone warned. "Anyway you'll probably see me some more."

OCCUPIED "HOT SEAT"

Incidentally, the gang leader who at one time was a member of New York's "Five Points" gang occupied the "hot seat" during his interview. This is a chair in Stege's office which has at one time or another been occupied by 14 men who subsequently have been found in ditches, riddled with bullets.

Capone kept his right hand deep in his overcoat pocket during the interview. No one asked what was in the pocket. Stege inquired as to the bandage which covered his hand. He had burned it taking a roast from the oven, Capone explained.

Warsaw, Poland, March 22 (AP)—A new comet of the seventh magnitude has been discovered by Prof. Wilk, assistant astronomer at Cracow observatory, it was announced here. The comet was found in the constellation Pisces.

Too Faint to Be Seen Without a Telescope

San Jose, Cal., March 22 (AP)—Dr. Robert G. Aitken, associate director of Lick Observatory, said a comet of the seventh magnitude, such as reported discovered by Prof. Wilk at Cracow, is too faint to be visible to the naked eye.

Data on the position of the new comet was expected to be transmitted from Harvard Observatory to Lick Observatory soon.

Dr. Aitken also announced that Lick astronomers had been successful in observing another comet, discovery of which was announced in Europe four days ago. It is located near the recently discovered "Planet X."

WHALEN QUIT? NOT A CHANCE!

New York, March 22 (AP)—Police Commissioner Grover A. Whalen today met rumors that he was about to resign with the statement that he had no intention of resigning "at this time."

His disclaimer answered the statement of a high city official which was interpreted in City Hall circles as lending corroboration to a rumor which has been persistent for some time.

"I have no intention of resigning at this time," Commissioner Whalen said. "I deny it without qualification."

Mayor James J. Walker said he had neither asked nor received Mr. Whalen's resignation.

Try to Save Whales From Vanishing in Face Creams

Washington, March 22 (AP)—Dr. Remington Kellogg, Smithsonian mammalogist, announced today he will leave New York Monday for Berlin to attend an international conference on whale conservation to begin April 3.

About 30,000 whales were killed last year, Dr. Kellogg estimated, and 600,000 since 1900, to supply the world with whale oil, whalebone and soaps, face creams and kindred products in which the oil prominently figures.

The whale, it was pointed out, no longer has a sporting chance, with use of the cannon-shot harpoon, swift steam vessels and "spotting" airplanes.

CRASH AUTO TO END GANG 'RIDE'

New York, March 22 (AP)—Two men who said they were being "taken for a ride" by three gangsters escaped today by driving their machine into a traffic policeman's booth in Columbus circle.

Traffic Patrolman John Grady, after picking himself up from his wrecked booth, grappled with one of the alleged kidnapers and with the assistance of the two intended victims subdued him.

The prisoner was identified as George Mott (Red) Hope, notorious gangster, who was released from Sing Sing prison only six weeks ago after serving 10 years for robbery. His companions escaped.

The two intended ride victims, Vincent Kleinmer and his brother-in-law, Lawrence McCarthy, told the police they were forced into their own automobile by the three men.

"Drive out to Long Island, Kleinmer," they quoted one of the men as saying. "You're being taken for a ride."

A charge of kidnaping was lodged against Hope, who also faces the possibility of being returned to Sing Sing to serve out the balance of his 20-year robbery sentence.

150 Shots Fired and Nobody Hit on Border

El Paso, Tex., March 22 (AP)—Border patrol men from El Paso fought a pitched battle with six Mexican smugglers near Anapra station, west of El Paso on the New Mexico-Mexico line. No border patrolmen were injured though more than 150 rounds of ammunition were fired.

The smugglers, bearing a large cargo of Mexican goods imported on their backs, dropped their loads and started firing when the officers halted them. Darkness necessitated firing with only gun flashes as targets. It was not determined whether there were casualties among the smugglers' ranks.

ASK $237,000 FROM WALSKA

Just a week ago, Mme. Walska, mistress of millions and wife of Harold F. McCormick, was subjected to another banking attachment. That was in a suit brought by the Musical Courier, weekly magazine, on a charge that the celebrated beauty and singer failed to pay for advertisements ordered two years ago.

The two new complainants are George Djamgaroff, who describes himself as a public relations counsel, and Emile D. Gutelson, vice-president of Ganna Walska Perfumes, Inc.

NAB 2 'SLAYERS' OF BEER KING

Hoboken, N. J., March 22 (AP)—John J. McGlone of New York and Alexander Martin of Hoboken were booked today at police headquarters on charges of having murdered Frankie Dunn, 32, multi-millionaire beer king, on March 7.

Police said McGlone admitted he was in Hoboken two weeks ago yesterday, when Dunn walked from luncheon into the marble-lined lobby of his office building at 68 Hudson st., to be greeted by machine gun and revolver bullets from three executioners.

The hopes of liberals, Darrow said, rest in modification of the Volstead act. He predicted that anti-prohibitionists would control the next Congress and would continue to gain strength at following elections.

TRYING THE SPECKLESS THEATER

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

If one may pass full judgment upon good deeds well done, the theater is gradually purging itself of that congenital irritation classed as the nasty play. While the naughty drama has not been totally ousted from the playhouses, authentic reports from headquarters indicate a growing disinterest in dirt and a broader public inclination toward works, which if not extravagantly moral, at least possess the virtue of good taste. One intelligent observer, Mr. Ray Henderson, comes out openly and declares that sin is on the run.

"WAR it only last season," he asks in wonder, "that the public and the press were all stirred up by the preponderance of vulgar language and questionable incidents on the stage? Theaters were padlocked (almost), actors were ridden to jail (and released on bail); and managers declared (with regret) that the only way to get an audience was to give it red hot pepper. And now, today, is there a single cuss word from Broadway to Hollywood?" Well, even without having all the facts at hand we are quite sure that purity in the theater is gaining ground, and if there isn't a single cuss word from Broadway to Hollywood, then reform certainly has laid hard hands upon some attractions.

Nicholas Young

WHAT Mr. Henderson in his own subtle way is attempting to show is that by this season's record of dramatic successes simple virtues are the real thing in the box office tabulations. The New York theater, nationally famed for the looseness of its morals, is setting a new fashion in plays without blush or blemish. Of the most prosperous he mentions "Berkeley Square," "Bird in Hand," "Broken Dishes," "Criminal Code," "June Moon," and a half dozen other trim and tidy entertainments.

OF course, the bawdy play never fares well in Boston, Mr. John M. Casey, official custodian of municipal morals, impressively looks after that detail. There were items, however, in "A Night in Venice" and "Young Sinners" which made both attractions undesirable for children. But, as Mr. Henderson has pointed out, major cuss words were missing in the dialogue. There is, undoubtedly, a steadily growing demand for cleaner plays. It is reflected here in "The New Moon," in Mr. George M. Cohan's "Gambling" and the splendid response that kept the Victor Herbert Festival running for a dozen weeks at the Majestic.

THESE virtues are not for the mighty alone. We have the word of L. M. Herk, master mind of the Mutual burlesque circuit, that next season's attractions in his list of 40 theaters, will be surprisingly original—and without taint. In another season, perhaps, our ornate tabernacles of art may each have its own sawdust trail.

The Classic Puts on Its Best Front to Compete With the Modern in the Theater

MARY PHILLIPS

MISS PHILLIPS is an exceedingly clever aide to George M. Cohan in "Gambling" now at the Tremont. The actress has plenty of personality and certainly knows how to act.

WALTER HAMPDEN AND CECIL YAPP

MR. HAMPDEN has apparently here adopted a policy of laugh and let laugh. He and Mr. Yapp are seen as they appear in "Caponsacchi" in Mr. Hampden's repertory at the Wilbur next week.

ROSALIND RUSSELL

MISS RUSSELL has an important role in the new play, "D. C. M.," at the Copley Monday. She is one of a number of capable performers in Mr. E. E. Clive's company in the Back Bay.

Alluringly Fair

EVELYN HERBERT

MISS HERBERT is the first magnitude star in "The New Moon" at the Shubert.

ROMANCE THE GREAT NEED OF DRAMA

By WALTER HAMPDEN

ROMANCE will never die in the theater any more than it will, in real life. Sordid realism exists in life and it exists on the stage, but it will never monopolize either to the exclusion of romance.

The theater always has had plays dealing more or less frankly with contemporary conditions, and it always will have, but these never yet have crowded romantic drama from the stage and probably never will.

What kind of plays are living today that were played 300 years ago? Romantic plays only. Which of Shakespeare's plays are most vital in the theater today? His romantic plays—not his comedies, except those comedies in which the true romantic spirit is most prevalent.

"Caponsacchi" is pure theatrical romance taken from a real life story. It is based upon Robert Browning's great dramatic narrative, "The Ring and the Book," which tells of as tragic a love of man for maid as ever held the attention of an audience. Here is reality given the force of illusion.

There was a revolt against romance in the theater beginning with Ibsen, but this revolt was not so much against romance itself as against the manner in which it was sentimentalized and otherwise degraded during a long period during which there was little or no original or creative effort in the theater.

But even during the height of this revolt, virile, heroic romance leaped to the front, and held its own on the stage of the world, and "Cyrano" and other plays of its general kind have not been absent from the theater since that time, and probably never will be again.

BOX OFFICE REVENUE WILL GO TO SHAKESPEARE MEMORIAL

THE Stratford-upon-Avon Festival Company, which opens a two weeks' engagement at the Hollis Monday, is the permanent organization at the Shakespeare Memorial Theater at Stratford, the town of the great dramatist's birth, long residence and death.

THE company is now at the close of its second North American tour, and immediately after the visit here, will sail for England to open the birthday festival season on April 21, at the Memorial Theater. That institution operates under royal charter and is under the patronage of His Majesty the King. The frankly stated purpose of the American tours is to add to the fund for the rebuilding and the endowment of the Shakespeare Memorial at Stratford, which was destroyed by fire in March, 1926. That edifice, which stood for 50 years, was one of the finest memorials in the world. It had been erected in the late seventies by the Shakespeare Memorial Association, under the leadership of Charles Edward Flower, who donated a tract of land and 50,000 pounds toward the enterprise.

W. Bridges Adams

The building contained a library, museum and the theater proper, upon the stage of which nearly every theatrical celebrity of England appeared. After the calamity, plans were instantly set forth to reconstruct the building on a more magnificent scale than before. It was decided that a fund of two and a half million dollars would be needed for the work of reconstruction and endowment of the Memorial.

An appeal for subscriptions was made to Shakespeare-lovers the world over, with the splendid result that two millions have already been subscribed.

The company, which will be seen here in its entirety, possesses a background of tradition which is an inspiration to its members. The organization has existed for nearly half a century, giving a season of Shakespearean plays in the spring and summer of each year at Stratford-upon-Avon.

In its early years there were many changes each season in the personnel of the company, but during the past 10 years, since Mr. W. Bridges Adams became a director, a strong effort has been made to keep the same players together year after year so that the company has developed in precisely the same fashion that a symphony orchestra is developed through long association.

ACTED FOR THE DOUGHBOYS

WHEN Elspeth Dudgeon steps into the role of Mary Scattergood in E. E. Clive's new war comedy, "D. C. M.," Distinguished Conduct Medal), at the Copley on Monday evening, it will bring back to her vivid memories of the two years during the war she spent back of the lines at Abbe Ville. Miss Dudgeon was a member of Linn Asheville's dramatic company, and during her long months in service, Abbe Ville, on the edge of the Cressy Forest, was the headquarters for these English players, who transferred their trouping from England to the war area.

Elspeth Dudgeon

A native of Glasgow, Miss Dudgeon's career began when Osmond Tearle saw her work in an amateur production. After the second act, Mr. Tearle sent his card and a request for an interview to Miss Dudgeon's dressing-room. Here was opportunity's knock, and Miss Dudgeon confesses that it was a difficult matter to come down to earth and the business and lines of the third act. But it was the beginning of a long, successful and happy career.

Actress Could Get Laughs From Turnip

Marie Dressler, veteran comedienne of the American stage and screen, plays the role of old Martha in Greta Garbo's first talking picture, "Anna Christie," on the screen at Loew's Orpheum next week. Miss Dressler is Canadian by birth and received a thorough general education from private tutors while on the stage. Her film career covers appearances in "The Joy Girl," "Breakfast at Sunrise," "The Patsy," "Bringing Up Father," "The Divine Lady," "Hollywood Revue" and "Chasing Rainbows."

BRAHMS WEEK BEGINS AT SYMPHONY

By MOSES SMITH

THE current pair of concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra constitutes the beginning of the Brahms Festival. Brahms was born in 1833 and died in 1897. So far as we know there is no special occasion for this festival. It was simply Koussevitzky's own idea.

And a good idea, too, Brahm's music, far from repelling the present generation as it did the preceding one — they thought it "unmelodic"—occupies the position of a best-seller. An all-one-composer program, to say nothing of a festival, is risky for the general concert-going public. Aside from Brahms, perhaps only Beethoven, Wagner and Chopin can stand the test.

Listening to the present program, consisting of the "Academic" Overture and the Second and Third Symphonies, we were not conscious of that fearful spectre—monotony. So far as we could observe, the audience was having a perfectly splendid time. True, the music of Brahms is characteristic, it has earmarks, it displays idiosyncrasies. But so it is true of any music or art worth its weight in salt.

You hear a Brahms theme and are perhaps "reminded" of a similar theme in another work of his. It is not idle repetition; but an opportunity has arisen for saying the same or similar thing in a new context. And there is no talking for effect; the speech is germane to the discussion, to continue the metaphor. Music is here genuinely a language.

The greatness of these works is now generally acknowledged. This is well, for it would be foolhardy to attempt to discuss their merits in a few paragraphs. It is interesting to note, however, the freshness which these essentially romantic—as well as classic —works have for the jazz-ridden-speed-worshipping, and sophisticated audience of 1930.

The performance in each case, at yesterday's concert, attested to the enthusiasm and care of Mr. Koussevitzky and to the virtosity of the orchestra. Of course there is ground for difference of opinion—not mere quibbling, either—as to his choice of tempi and dynamics. But the spirit, the romantic glow, the apparently effervescent spontaneity are present. Those are the things that count.

Plays Remaining

"The Chocolate Soldier," moving from Majestic to Lyric. (Second week.) Merry times in the Balkans, with an Oscar Straus score to keep the tempo exactly right.

George M. Cohan in "Gambling" at the Tremont. (Third week.) Mr. Cohan plays ferret in a polite way and runs down a murderer.

"The New Moon" at the Shubert. (Sixth week.) Romance of days when men were men—and too particular.

* * *

"Little Accident" at the Plymouth. (Tenth week.) Thomas Mitchell and his merry play soon take first place in the season's endurance record.

Lady Babbie

BARBARA STANWYCK

MISS STANWYCK is the featured girl in "Mexicali Rose" at Scollay Square Olympia.

SOCIETY GIRL STAGE HIT

TO the steadily increasing list of society girls who have adopted the stage as a profession, Crosby Gaige added the name of Elvia Enders when he was organizing his "Little Accident" company. Miss Enders had had no previous stage experience except in amateur theatricals. She simply came into the Gaige office and told her story and was straightway engaged for the role of the Vickery, Ill., "deb" who is about to be married and who suddenly finds that the happy-go-lucky fiance has disappeared. Her story had much to do with her stage debut in this rollicking Dell-Mitchell comedy at the Plymouth. Miss Enders' father is president of the Hartford National Bank. Eager to make herself independent after leaving school, she first took up newspaper work on the Hartford Courant.

Elvia Enders

Miss Enders looked around for some new field to conquer. She decided it would be the stage. Not until she reached the Crosby Gaige office did she have any luck.

Another Ziegfeld Girl Climbing in the Movies

Barbara Stanwyck, who plays a leading role in "Mexicali Rose," all-talking drama of Mexican border life which is now making its first Boston showing at the Scollay Square Olympia, danced from her earliest childhood. When she was 16 she signed her first professional contract to dance. A chorus engagement in the musical show, "Keep Cool," followed.

It was during the run of "Keep Cool" that Barbara first received recognition. She and five other girls were picked to do imitation numbers of the principals. Barabara a bit was to impersonate Louis Wolheim as the "Hairy Ape."

THEM THAR HILLS ARE ALL GOLD

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

THE covered wagon, with all that deep appeal of the great open spaces and their call to the wanderlust lying inside all of us, is on screen again. It comes, not under its own name, as in the days of the silent drama, but gaudily decked out in Technicolor and most tunefully set forth, with a good many jazz-age trimmings. Its spirit shines brilliantly through the "Song of the West," now being shown at the Washington Street Olympia and Uptown.

* * *

THERE are varied pleasures to be had in seeing this picture. To us its chief glory lay in its gorgeous portrayal in natural hue of the Western hills and plain, the rolling wagons of the Forty-Niners, the freshness and vigor of outdoor sequences that have high motion picture value because the camera-ars given a wide scope. "Song of the West," however, has other assets; for one thing, its story is really interesting. In several ways it is a notable production. One would not expect an operetta to drip so much honey of scenic nature, nor to go so far afield for classy backgrounds and other non-synthetic material. But Warner Bros. have seen to it that "Song of the West" is something besides photographed musical drama.

John Boles

JOHN BOLES' triumph in "Rio Rita" has naturally brought him to the front, and here he is again the hero. He is very presentable, and has already acquired the backing of a host of fluttering flapper hearts. His fan mail is enormous, so 'tis said. He is possessed of an excellent voice. Opposite him is Vivienne Segal, a graduate of the musical comedy stage. She, too, will have many admirers. But for us, the personal highlight is that corking good funster, Joe. E. Brown, sterling here as he has been in his every offering. If you want to flee your worries, just watch him do his stuff. Aiding him is the snappy little Marion Byron, the "Peanuts" of Hollywood. She hasn't been in many films, but one can safely wager a dollar or two she is in them to stay. Sam Hardy and Eddie Gribbon are both fine.

THE magnificence of the "Song of the West" generally is somewhat marred by the introduction of modern inventions, such as adagio dancers and tangoers, in the "wild and woolly" dancing places. But the picture has so many refreshing features, and rings so sincerely with the spirit of the California gold rush days, that anachronisms can be forgiven, inasmuch as they are not vital to the tale.

THE phonofilm is adapted from the operetta "Rainbow," for which Vincent Youmans wrote the music and Oscar Hammerstein, 2d, and Laurence Stallings the book. The action begins at the old Fort Independence, and swings westward, ho! over the trail of the original covered wagons. The songs are excellent, and a large chorus makes the ensembles full and toneful.

WILL WELLMAN IS TO DIRECT FOR WARNER BROTHERS

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, March 21.

WILLIAM WELLMAN had no more than said "au revoir" to Paramount than he landed with both feet at the Warner Brothers' lot. He and Darryl Zanuck got together over the coffee, or perhaps it was soup, and made out a little contract, which gives Billy Wellman the right to direct Warner Brothers' pictures.

His first is "Precious Little Thing" by Gottler, Meyers and Mitchell and it is to have Joe E. Brown, Evelyn Knapp and James Hall in the cast. Wellman has one of the most interesting war records of anyone in the film industry. Digressing just for a brief second, Billy was an ace and was cracked up so badly that he was in a hospital for months. He was a buddy of the late Quentin Roosevelt and after the death of young Roosevelt he was invited by Col. and Mrs. Roosevelt to visit Oyster Bay. He spent some time telling them about their brave young son.

ALMA RUBENS has a chance to come to the screen with the New Opportunities. Universal has offered her a very lucrative contract which goes into effect as soon as the studio reopens in May and after she returns from her vaudeville tour. She is working hard, making the most of her chances and trying her best to come back in the right way. She will have featured roles in next year's Universal pictures and if she continues to keep well we may expect to be writing pleasant reviews about her, for Alma can act.

Matt Moore to Direct

JUST a few little pick-me-up notes of interest in Hollywood. Matt Moore, youngest of the Moore brothers, will direct for Columbia. Matt, with all the years of experience he has had on the screen, ought to know more about the technique of the screen than the average actor. F. K. O. has been searching for a role for Betty Compson and has finally decided to remake "Inside the Lines" by Earl Derr Biggers. That stirring war drama was a Vitagraph special in the old days before talkies were even dreamed of. Bill Cody who used to do his Western stuff for Pathe, will make six outdoor Westerns for Sono Art. These hip-hip hooray numbers are to be produced by Cliff Broughton at Metropolitan studios.

ONE of Hollywood's most popular bachelors will be missing when Harry D'Arrast departed for New York. Harry has signed a contract to return to the Famous Players-Lasky field and will make his first picture at the Long Island studio. It was Walter Wagner who signed the young Frenchman and who agreed that the first D'Arrast picture should be "Laughter," an original. Remember it was "Laughter" that Harry wrote several years ago when he expected to direct Norma Talmadge.

TRAIN LOCALE FOR FILMS

THE Repertory, starting tomorrow, will present "China Express," a vivid picturization of an incident during the Chinese Revolution. Ilya Trauberg, youthful director, has handled this play with artistry. His locale is a fast train; one of its sequences is as follows: "I'm one coach of the train the representatives of the ruling class are making a last stand against the revolution. Realizing that all is lost, a diplomat shoots himself as he exclaims: 'My country will avenge my death.' Some of the soldiers of the guard go over to the rebels. The China Express is now in the hands of the people.

REAL CRADLE SONG GAVE THE START

THE rise to fame of John McCormack, great tenor, now in his first talking picture, "Song O' My Heart," and which begins its only New England engagement this season at the Majestic Monday night, is one of the most remarkable in musical history. The question has frequently been asked: "Who discovered McCormack?" As a youth he sang, but it never occurred to him that he could turn his vocal talents to commercial account. One day he sat at the piano in Dublin accompanying himself in one of his favorite songs. A doctor entered the room.

"Don't stop," said he, as McCormack started to get up from the piano; 'begin again and let me hear it all."

When the song was finished the doctor took his leave.

"I'm going to get Vincent O'Brien," he said. "I want him to hear you sing."

O'Brien was one of the most important musical personages in Dublin. McCormack sang "Then You'll Remember Me," from "The Bohemian Girl."

"Young man," exclaimed O'Brien, "there is a fortune in that voice. Don't you dream of being anything but a singer."

A few months later there was a big musical competition in Dublin. O'Brien persuaded McCormack to take part and gave him private instruction. The young tenor easily carried off the first prize.

"Who did you learn to sing?" an acquaintance once asked John McCormack.

"In my cradle," he replied.

Roland Hayes

Roland Hayes, returning from a Western tour which has included appearances on the Pacific Coast, will give a third and last recital in Boston before sailing for Europe. The tenor will appear in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, April 20.

SAYS PLAYERS LEARN FROM AUDIENCES

Geo. M. Cohan

"I ALWAYS listen to the audience. If they don't like something in a play they'll tell me. Then it's out, no matter how much I may like it. If they say yes, I find some way to keep it in." It is George M. Cohan talking between acts in his dressing room at the Tremont, where he is appearing in "Gambling." When this wizard of the theater speaks he says something. He goes on:

"Of course, audiences today talk to a player more politely than when I made my start in the variety theaters, but they tell them just the same, by all sorts of signs of inattention. And it is much easier to make a performance right when you are one of the audience than when you are one of the players, obliged to keep your thoughts on your part.

"I remember one night, some 20 odd years ago, when my father and mother, sister Josie and I opened at the People's Theater, Cincinnati. It was a Sunday night audience, the toughest on the circuit to please, we were told by the people around the theater. They were right. We opened with a quiet little act that had gone well everywhere else.

"Before the curtain had been up two minutes on our turn a fellow in the gallery yelled, 'Hey, what's the idea? If you've got anything to sell, show it.' That was just a starter. You didn't have to wait in those days of vaudeville to be told by the manager to change your act. The fellow who paid his good money to get into the theater told you himself.

"Everything is made easy for the vaudeville performer now, with special lighting and scenic effects, comfortable dressing-rooms and every assistance possible backstage. We used to set our own stage, if we wanted anything but the same old house drops for a background, and we had to clear the stage when our act was over."

Artur Schnabel

Artur Schnabel has come from Germany to be a distinguished soloist at the Brahms Festival in Symphony Hall. Schnabel's reputation in Europe is of many years' standing. He has often been called the greatest interpreter of Brahms among living pianists.

PICKING CAST FOR MOVIE HARD JOB

Chester Morris

"UNCONVENTIONAL in every aspect—the most difficult picture I have ever had to cast—a story that intrigued my interest the moment I read it." Such is Herbert Brenon's description of his latest talking picture, "The Case of Sergeant Grischa," now at the New B. F. Keith. The special production, acclaimed an epic of life behind the war-torn battle fronts of Germany and Russia during the World War, has Chester Morris and Betty Compson in the feature roles, with a strong supporting cast. "I spent months selecting my players for 'The Case of Sergeant Grischa,'" Brenon relates.

"I made screen and voice tests of scores of actors before I came to Chester Morris. When I saw and heard Morris on the screen I knew I had found Grischa. He threw off the appearances and conventionalities of modern life and becomes a new, altogether different personality.

Daring Story of Eternal Love Triangle

Ardeth Carroll, beauty, lives in the drab home of her Aunt Stella. Neil Burke, downstairs, claims Ardeth as his. She is uncertain. She yearns for a fuller life. She quarrels with her cousin, Bet, whose room she shares. Ardeth sees the man of her dreams, Ken Gleason. Neil is furiously jealous. Jeannette Parker, society girl, plans to use Ardeth in schemes for revenge. She opens a shop and engages Ardeth to run it. Ardeth sees that she can never marry Neil. Ken comes to the shop and meets Ardeth. Both are secretly impressed. Next day Ken takes her home in his auto. Sunday they spend on Ken's houseboat. Their first kiss.

CHAPTER 14

THE sight of Ken coming toward her through the fog sent a wave of shame over Ardeth.

In a flash of reason she saw her mental torments, her anger of the past few days, as childish —as worse, presumptuous. After all—what had she to criticise in his behavior? Her eagerness to see him again, had made her take too much for granted.

Suppose he had been with Cecile Parker last night. He was not bound to her—to Ardeth. But—oh, he had cared enough to come back!

All this confused reasoning flashed through her mind in the moment it took Ken to reach her.

He was taking off his hat. Smiling.

"I've been watching you through the window, working like a beaver."

"Why didn't you come in, silly!"

The tired girl of the moment before was gone. She was glowing. Vibrant. Looking down at her vivid face, the man thought again the alabaster lamp with its rose flame.

"Afraid of getting swamped in women," he grinned. "I beat it away when Jeanette came out with her gang. I might have got tangled in some dinner date—"

Her eyes danced. "Is that gallant?"

"At least it's truthful." He hesitated, then dared. "And since you're such a stickler for truths, here's another—there's one date I'd almost give my ears to get tangled with. Ardeth, aren't you starved?"

She looked away with an attempt at deliberation though her heart was singing.

"My aunt always keeps dinner waiting for me in the oven if I'm late . . .

Don't let him guess that she was thrilling to his presence. No move of him escaped her. Little tricks—already so dearly familiar. The way his face lit when he smiled . . . how his lashes narrowed when he grew intent. With the fingers of her mind she was caressing him, stroking the thick brown hair— his finely marked eyebrows. Loving the whimsical lift of one brow when he smiled.

An hour later the dish of beef stew and mashed turnips which Aunt Stel had placed in the oven for her niece had dried to a leathery mass.

Ardeth was facing Ken over a small cafe table.

"Jennie's party a success today?" he asked.

"Overwhelming! I didn't think women could hold so much tea. There was one woman—like the character in the Pickwick Papers—you know, the one with the Waller—or was it his father told of? She'd had her fifth cup of tea and was 'swelling wisibly'."

He grinned appreciatively. Then sobered. "You're a funny child! I didn't think modern girls read Dickens."

"I have a set of his works. My father gave them to me. The birthday before he died."

"Tell me about yourself. Do you know, I hardly know a thing about you?"

She looked teasingly across at him. "Should you?"

"Of course I know all the really important things. That your eyes are lozenge shaped and one can look miles down into them and see the strangest things—"

"As, for instance—?"

"Well, tonight, while you were debating whether or not to stay out, there were little gold flecks swimming far down in them. Like a swarm of golden bees. You have bees in your eyes!"

"I appear to be the whole insect world!" She spoke as demurely as though her heart were not racing.

He eyed her sternly. "Behave yourself, Moth!"

Golden eyes dancing across at him, brimming with laughter. Sinking suddenly under the blue fire of his gaze.

"And your name—know what I thought when I first heard Jeanette call you Ardeth? I saw a mediaeval princess weeping alone on a tower top. You were wrapped in a golden cloak, standing against a sunset sky—"

"What was I weeping for?"

"Because I was riding away to war."

"And you saw all this while I

Forty Wellesley College girls were driven to the street today when fire, starting in the basement of the Wellesley College Club at 131 Commonwealth ave., sent clouds of smoke through the five-story building.

MEDFORD BOY FOILS KIDNAPER

Medford school authorities today reported to police an attempt to kidnap Alfred Di Giovanni, nine, of Bowdoin st., a pupil in the Lincoln school.

The boy was attacked by a truck driver in Harvard st. while on his way to attend class. The driver attempted to carry him into the truck and young Giovanni fought back, suffering a cut on his head. He finally broke free of the abductor's grasp and ran to the school.

There he was hysterical for two hours, in such condition that his teacher could not learn his story until the truck driver had made his escape. Miss Alice H. Moore, assistant principal, reported to police. The boy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Di Giovanni.

Mishap Sends Hub Trawler Into Port

Limping back into port encased in ice, the trawler Donald, Capt. Bradford Amero, reported a tale of hard luck on the Georges Banks. The trawler had no sooner dropped its nets for the first time, when the clutch on the hoisting gear, was broken, and the fisherman started back to port.

THINK HEIRESS IS SUICIDE

While a legacy of $10,000 awaits her, Lynn police today expressed the belief that the body of Mrs. Hazel Raymond, niece of the late Andrew Dunton, pioneer Lynn shoe manufacturer lies on the bottom of Flax or Sluice ponds or in Lynn harbor.

The pretty divorcee, mother of a six-year-old daughter, Barbara, has not been seen since talking with her fiancee in Central sq., Lynn, a few minutes after she had written a farewell suicide note. That she knew of the $10,000 fortune was apparent in her note. She asked, "What are riches when there is no love."

According to the police Mrs. Raymond, who divorced her first husband a year ago, had been keeping company with Edward Cahill. It is reported that she pleaded with him to marry her and that because of unemployment he had asked her to wait. During the conversation in Central sq., Mrs. Raymond was seen weeping bitterly.

Today police will make a systematic search of the ponds in Lynn and also the water front. A year ago Mrs. Raymond attempted to end her life by gas.

Berg Will Name 2 Malden Fire Captains

Fire Commissioner C. David Berg of Malden, who refused to resign on the request of Mayor Hastings, announced today he had asked the Civil Service Commission for an extension of the Civil Service list which expires March 29.

Berg declared he had made the request so he might appoint the two captains in the department requested by Hastings. The commissioner said he could not make the appointments until the mayor provided additional funds to take care of the salary.

SEA FISHES FOR THE BREEZE IN BITTER GALE

Huge Wave Pour Bushels of Herring Aboard a Hub Boat During Storm

"When gale winds howl
And fishers growl
And vessels buck the seas,
There's luck on prowl
In all that 'foul'
About the trawler Breeze."
—From the Chant of Georges.

With this chant on their lips, the hardy crew of the steam trawler Breeze reached the fish pier today with a weird story of gales, luck and herring.

In a man's sized gale, 60 miles east'ard of Highland Light, Capt. John Haily "deposed" today, hundreds of bushels of herring were thrown aboard his craft by a giant sea.

Fishing for groundfish had ceased and the crew was occupied with keeping the craft topside up when the huge wave broke over her bow.

When the wash had lowered and men had hazed themselves for the next, a glittering mass of herring squirmed on all parts of the deck. A scramble for containers and the harvest was reaped, but not before several of the lardy ones were threatened with watery graves on the next wave broke over the ship.

Today the gift from the sea brought handsome prices at the fish pier and gave the men of the Breeze a new confidence that the green waters of Georges are not in a conspiracy to wreak hard luck on honest men.

Further efforts to save the life of Dr. Walter H. Sturgis, head of the Sturgis Hospital at Allerton, who has been fighting a serious heart attack, coupled with pneumonia, for several days, were taken today when 14 tanks of oxygen were rushed from Boston to Hull.

The Hull physician was stricken at the home of a friend, Frank Richardson, of Hull Village, where he is now lying in too critical a condition to be moved to his own hospital nearby. He is being attended by Dr. John Sweeney of Hingham, who has called into consultation Dr. Frothingham, heart specialist, and Dr. Kimpton, both of Boston.

Two firemen are needed to administer the oxygen, and all members of the Hull department have been called at various times to assist in the work.

Dr. Sturgis is commander of Hull, Cohasset and Hingham Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, member of the Hull board of health and its fire department physician.

He and Somano were arrested October 25 in connection with the seizure of a truckload of liquor, valued at several thousand dollars, but defaulted in court the following month.

John V. Phelan, appearing as counsel for Kelley, declared that the latter was only an employe of a man higher up. PLAN STRONGER BORDER PATROL ON AUTO ROADS

Washington, March 22 (INS)—The present method of controlling motor traffic across the Canadian and Mexican borders will be changed radically in a new border patrol bill being prepared by the Treasury for consideration of Congress as a part of the Hoover campaign for prohibition enforcement.

Hundreds of highway lanes over which rum runners send their high-powered cars with choice foreign vintages for Americans able to pay the price will be closed to traffic, under the scheme.

To prevent interference with the normal course of border business, however, scores of new customs stations will be opened for the convenience of travelers.

The border patrol plan recommended to Congress by President Hoover, has been virtually completed by treasury experts, after consultation with the immigration, customs, agricultural bureaus and the coast guard.

While the major purpose of the bill—unifying all government enforcement agents along the borders into one border patrol army under the coast guard—has been well known, the decision to establish new ports of entry and to limit roads which may be used, was decided upon only after careful investigation.

NEW ROADS AND FENCES FOR AIRPORT

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

While the Legislature is debating the bill to turn over to the city 40 acres of mud flats for further development of Boston Airport, work is being rushed on the erection of fences around the commercial and army buildings, and a new sewer system is being installed.

A new road also will be laid in back of the commercial hangars, meeting with the entrance circle, and a macadam apron will be constructed in front. This apron will extend over the field for 150 feet, thus reducing the dust nuisance of the summer.

According to Airport Superintendent Albert L. Edson, the fences will stop entering between the hangars from the front, and avoid the chance of spectators wandering in front of a turning propellor and chip taxi up to the hangars.

In front of the buildings the cyclone type fence will give way to a four foot iron picket affair, permitting the spectators to see over it, while preventing their going out on the apron.

"We don't want the people to get the idea that we are trying to scare them away," said Edson, "but we do want them to realize that those fences are being installed for their safety."

Antique a Day No. 53

Unusual is hardly the word to apply to the utensil shown today. This old piece of ironware is possibly unique. The purposes for which it was made are almost lost in the fog of antiquity, and we can depend only upon hearsay until someone is able to make a positive diagnosis of its utility.

The piece pictured here is over 200 years old, and has lain in an old New Hampshire house for the greater part of that time. It is supposed to be a utensil for heating tallow or eel-grease, to be used for hair-dressing by men of the late 1700's.

The owner states that such articles were used by the Hessian troops employed by Great Britain in our Revolutionary War. The Hessians wore their hair long and in pig-tails, while the English and American style of formal dress called for wigs. Being soldiers, it was necessary for them to keep their hair slicked down much in the fashion of modern patent-leather shelk style. Hence the need for a toilet article such as this.

The heater is a single piece of wrought iron, shaped something like a modern gravy dish. The lower saucer part has a spout on the narrow edge opposite the handle. There was originally a hinged lid for the top.

The piece is owned by Mrs. Alice M. Osborne of 138 College ave., Somerville, and came originally from a house in West Concord, N. H.

In connection with the Massachusetts Tercentenary Year, the Boston Evening American is publishing daily photographs of interesting antiques. Owners of genuine antiques, particularly of Colonial or early American origin or of historic association, are invited to forward photographs and records for publication. If a photograph is not available, the American will send a cameraman to photograph the antique, provided the owner lives in Greater Boston. Address the "Antique Editor, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston."

His groups have numbered as high as 150. Today his trip will be into the Syrian quarter. Dr. Jump's sermon tomorrow morning will be on the "Parable of Growth." Mr. and Mrs. Hoover Hear Woman Preach

Eleanor Wood of Quincy, a recognized Friends minister, was one of two speakers at the Friend's church, Washington, last Sunday, where the Hoovers attend regularly. The President appeared interested and listened attentively.

HUB Y. M. C. A. IS ALMOST SELF SUPPORTING

A 10 per cent added to what members of the Boston Y bring into that organization yearly will complete a budget of nearly $1,500,000. That 10 per cent is, however, of tremendous importance to boys and young men who frequent the various branches and the headquarters on Huntington ave. Without it

Each year a group of loyal Boston business men come together under expert leadership and for one week devote time, energy and good gray matter in the difficult task of raising nearly $150,000.

This year the "budget balancing week" has been postponed from January, the usual time, to this coming week. The story the solicitors will tell tonight can be topped by any other Y, in the country in many ways. In the first place, the Boston Y. was the first in this country. It is the pioneer and forerunner of all Y. M. C. A.'s organized since. In the second place, most other Y's are compelled to raise at least sixty per cent of their yearly expenditures. The Boston Y supports and runs a university, the Northeastern University, in which hundreds of young men are yearly fitted for their life work.

The Boston Y runs three camps during the summer months, to which youths of all ages flock for their annual week end for rest from strenuous business. These camps are located in New England's most beautiful lake regions.

The Boston Y. was among the first to organize a scientific system of health culture through gymnasia and compulsory physical examination. From this department have gone forth scores, even thousands, of healthy human beings who otherwise might have been invalids dependent on the charity of communities.

Vocational training and advice are outstanding benefits which many who go to the Y. appreciate and profit by. There are 10 branches in Greater Boston and as many as 16,000 young people attend during the season.

The Boston Y is outstanding in its liberal policy, and the boy who wants to become a member need not give proof of faith. The present membership is made up of 17 per cent Catholic boys and 10 per cent Jewish boys. The color line is not drawn and a number of negro members enjoy all privileges. Among the host of managers are members of the liberal as well as the conservative church.

Among impressive figures of the Boston Y may be enumerated—Number of different members in 1929, 15,676; Medical and physical examinations, 5969; Class attendance Northeastern University, 1, 286,626; 5064 boys enrolled in night and evening school; 8047 attendance at religious meetings; 12,240 daily attendance average at the various buildings.

RETREAT FOR CATHOLIC MEN

The 55th annual retreat of the Young Men's Catholic Association of Boston will open in the Church of the Immaculate Conception, on East Concord st., Sunday evening, April 6, at 7:45 o'clock. This retreat has been a feature of the work of the association since its inception, and from the small beginning, in 1876, has grown to tremendous proportions.

At the first retreat a fair sized gathering attended, 180 members of the association, and others, young men of Boston and vicinity, who were invited by the association to take part in these exercises. This invitation has been renewed each succeeding year, until at present, both the upper and lower church (St. Valentine's Chapel) are filled to overflowing with men from all sections of Greater Boston.

The retreat in the upper church will be conducted by Rev. Charles W. Lyons, S. J., and in the lower church by Rev. Cornelius A. Murphy, S. J.

Tremont Theater Lenten Meetings

A steady growth in audiences attending the Tremont Theater lenten meetings now running each day under the auspices of the Greater Boston Federation of Churches has encouraged the leaders to believe that the theater will be filled to its doors this coming week when the Rev. Robert Watson is to be the preacher for the entire week, with the exception of Monday, when the Rev. Theodore C. Soares, D. D., of the University of Chicago is the preacher. Dr. Watson has been especially acceptable to radio listeners who appreciate his clear, practical messages. Song stars for the week include Eleanor Veil, George S. Dane, James R. Houghton, and Charles H. Henry.

Dr. Watson

Dr. Watson's daily themes are: Tuesday, "Challenge of Christ"; Wednesday, "Who Are the Challenged"; Thursday, "The Pledged Performance"; Friday, "The Method Essential."

Letters From Readers

Something to Think About

Editor Boston American:

In the heat of controversy we are too apt to forget that no matter what we may believe, or seek to prove, truth governs and it is the part of wisdom to know the truth and try to follow it.

It seems to me to be only fair to ask those who are attempting to repeal the 18th Amendment, to show in what respect the following statements are not true:

The disease of alcoholism is induced by temperate drinking. It is the most prolific source of misery, vice and crime. The only way to wipe out the disease is to dry up its source.

Self-protection is an inherent right—the liquor traffic is an evil against which you have the right to use the most efficient means of self defense.

It is not possible to regulate the use of liquor, and eliminate the saloon, without infringing personal liberty, and without class legislation.

Every child has a right to be born of sober parents. Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness are all handicapped by the hereditary taint of alcohol in the blood. Every child has a right to the same chance that you would claim for yourself.

Y. W. MERRICK.

Backs Deportation of Alien Criminals

Editor Boston American:

Your editorial "Oust Undesirable Aliens" was fine. It is absolutely true that the alien gangsters would prefer 10 years in prison, at the expense of the government, to deportation. The end of crime will be here shortly if you continue such editorials.

Theory of Solar System Reversed

Editor Boston American:

We have been told that planets belonging to our solar system were originally parts of our Sun thrown into space either as a whole or as dust, the dust in time forming into solid globes.

That is only a theory. Is it not reasonable to imagine that instead of being thrown from the Sun that we are being gradually drawn into the Sun to feed its eternal fire.

The Earth at certain times moves towards or away from the Sun, it comes into opposition of the major planets. When the Sun is placed between the bulky Jupiter and Saturn and our planet then our planet is drawn inwards to the Sun by the added attraction of Jupiter and Saturn.

The distance that our planet decreases its orbit from the Sun at such opposition is imperceptible to the best astronomical instruments and yet our planet may in thousands or millions of years occupy the orbit which Mercury holds at present, while Mercury, Venus and the Asteroids would already have been drawn into the Sun and feeding its fire.

When our planet is so near the Sun that the attraction of the Sun shall draw our planet into its body then with the most terrific speed it will impel itself hundreds of miles within the Sun's body.

We now living need not worry. This will not occur until many millions of years hence.

Fingerprinting of Students Favored

Editor Boston American:

It pleased me very much when I read the article written by Mattie Frances in regard to palm and fingerprinting of students. I do think every school should adopt such a method. My daughter, 13, is placed in an exclusive school and I made special efforts to have her palms and fingerprints taken and analyzed and placed on file before she enrolled.

I think all parents should do the same. If a child cannot study there must be something wrong, and it would be absurd to hypnotize that child to make it study. Palms do reveal the real character and nature of everyone. Won't some mothers express their opinion upon the subject? MRS. N. S. S.

Codman and League Motives Impugned

Editor Boston American:

Of all the erroneous statements by the wets, none has surpassed the reported utterances of Julius Codman, paid attorney of the Constitutional Liberty League.

The wets of Mr. Codman's league and kindred associations have ever done all in their power to discredit our constitutional amendment and the Volstead law. They have encouraged bootleggers by their attacks on our law. They have mourned the death of every outlaw who lost his life defying our law and constitution. They are now playing their trump card to break down this endorsement, in their drive to repeal the 18th Volstead act. Be not deceived, this is all done to make nullification of our constitution easier. Do they set up the hypocritical claim that it's all in the interest of temperance. It is a blow aimed at not only enforcement, but primarily at the constitution of the United States.

Parents Urged to Instruct Children

Editor Boston American:

To "a mother" who urges more reserve in sex discussions by men physicians—I agree with her that women physicians are the best agents of information on this particular subject for young women ONLY when the one is no mother to tell them. Mothers, I think, are the best agents of all. No mother should quake her dust by letting her daughters learn matters of life from outside sources, because they may not always get the right information that way. Mothers should tell their daughters; fathers should tell their sons, all they should be told—when they are old enough.

I particularly appeal to mothers, during my radio broadcast on Feb. 22 last, to advise and help their children with their problems and to encourage them to confide in their parents. I am the mother of four daughters myself. Two of them are grown-up. Whenever they have any questions to ask, they come to me, their mother.

I've had no worry, so far, regarding my girls, and I think it's because I've always tried to be chummy with them.

Rebukes Critic of Somerville Mayor

Editor Boston American.

After reading the article of J. J. S., Somerville, criticizing Mayor Murphy in which he finds it strange that the mayor should be hounded and need a bodyguard, I am of the opinion that he was one of the hunters, and because of the method that he is using to show his feelings I have come to the conclusion that perhaps something may be missing which he would have to possess to qualify for a position. If he used his brains more he wouldn't have to rely on somebody else getting work for him. I hope that the readers of the Boston Evening American are advanced mentally ahead of him and pay no attention to anyone afraid to sign his name and address.

FLATLEY SAYS

"NICK" FLATLEY

Irate Attorney Blasts Boxing That Fuller Foul

ALL is not beer and skittles in the life of a boxing commissioner. There are more arguments and wrangles in the ring racket than a flock of the justly famous London fish-wives could provide. Just now, Maj.-Gen. Foote, who, as head of the Public Safety Commission, is the theoretical boss of boxing, is being bombarded with Ciceronic letters by Joseph Scolponeti, one of the assistant district-attorneys, who is also the legal guardian of Sammy Fuiler, the box-fighter.

Sammy, as you remember, was charged with a foul in a fight with Jake Zeramby at the Fenway. Sammy's money was held up, per order of somebody, and a bitter war has been going on since to get a chunk of it.

Sammy, through his attorney, first brought suit against the Arena club, which had the dough That action was withdrawn. Then Sammy, through his attorney, tried to get the Boxing Commission to do something

Which brings us to the point of our idea. Atty. Scolponeti has appealed to that body, and evidently been handed the run-around. So now he takes his stenographer into conference, and issues a fiery epistle to Commissioner Foote. Sections of it are packed with accusations, innuendo and flowery abuse. As letters go, it is a good job.

But the august and harried commissioner, having read it, will probably mutter ho-hum, and turn in what he considers more important business. Fans are interested in Fuller, and most of them believe his foul in that particular scrap was accidental. They think Sammy deserves his money, and we will be interested in his attorney's efforts to collect.

SAMMY'S attorney is not loafing, as the following excerpts from his letter to Commissioner Foote will prove

"OF course," writes the assistant D. A., "if as chairman of the board, you major-general, took a more active interest in the duty the Legislature has imposed upon you, much of the existing furore in the boxing game would be eliminated. Unfortunately you have chosen to delegate most, if not all power upon Commissioner Buckley, whose arrogant and injudicious attitude is responsible for most of the ills which have befallen this sport."

Then the irate attorney goes somewhat into the personal side, but recovers and hops back to his allegations

"Again, sir," he dictated, "I charge you and your commission with unqualified unfairness toward Sammy Fuller by reason of your persistent refusal to inquire and determine the boxa rights with reference to the Zeramby-Fuller matter."

THE angry barrister then brings in something about malfeasance and misfeasance, which make the whole thing thoroughly legal, not to mention vague.

"MAJ.-GEN. FOOTE," the blast proceeds, "I charge you with neglect of duty. Mr. Buckley with an arrogant, defiant and impractical discharge of responsibility. I urge you again that you allow the public you represent to know the truth concerning Referee Walsh's decision in the Zeramby-Fuller fight. Why do you hesitate? Does Fuller haunt your Commission, even as Banquo's ghost did Macbeth—murder will out"

WE all recall that the foul was called in that fight, but that no order about holding up money was issued in the ring. Which gives the plaintiffs solid ground for argument under our state law.

PERSONALLY, we have believed that the Mass. Commission handled boxing much more smoothly and equitably than other state commissions seem to be able to. There are very few boxing explosions in Massachusetts. Managers and fighters generally are willing to abide by what the Commission rules

Indignant Squire Scolponeti seems to have something of the same idea. He winds up his barrage with the following sentence: "Your gracious and favorable consideration is again solicited and a hearing requested at your earliest convenience"

Nothing could be more polite than that.

MONTREAL, Que., March 22 —After a one day layoff, the Bruins and Maroons will clash in the second game of the championship series tonight at the Forum.

The defending champions now have the edge of the Montrealers, having taken the first game after a long, drawn-out and uninteresting conflict.

Bill Grimes

Having come through with a victory in the first game, the Bruins are confident that they will clean up Maroons. The Bruins were more or less nonplussed by the Montreal style of play in the opening game, but they will unleash an attack tonight which is expected to meet with more success than was produced by the offense used on Thursday

Judging from the defensive tactics of the Maroons, they have been instructed to cover Dit Clapper if they want to stop the Bruins. Only on one or two occasions was Clapper able to shake himself free over his covers. And, due to the close covering, the Bruin attack did not function as effectively as it did during the regular season

Tonight, Cooney Weiland and Dutch Gainor will team up, and Clapper will be the trailing forward, a role Dutch Gainor has been playing all season. With the Maroons watching Clapper, Manager Art Ross expects that Gainor will be able to break through and set himself for passes from Weiland

Maroons Confident They Will Defeat Bruins

Although Babe Seibert will be out of tonight's game, having suffered another injury to his knee, the Maroons are still confident of coming through with their first win on home ice over the Bruins

They did look better than the Bruins in the first game for about one-half of the game, but as they failed to deliver in the first game there does not appear to be much hope for them tonight

Due to the great success of the Bruins this season, it was only natural for them to be somewhat nervous on Thursday. They realized their great responsibility, and until late in the second period they were unable to click

But, as soon as they pulled back on even terms with the Maroons the entire complexion of the game changed. They were the dejected Bruins who had been thrilling the fans all season, in spite of the fact that they required over a half-hour of sudden death to put across the winning marker

Bruins Suffered Two Casuals in First Game

The Bruins came out of the first encounter with two casuals, Dutch Gainor and Lionel Hitchman, Red Dutton roped Gainor in the first period and threw the Calgary boy heavily to the ice. Dutch landed on his left elbow and came up with a bad bruise.

Trainer Win Green worked on Gainor until early yesterday morn-

B. U. Swordsmen to Meet N.Y.U. Tonight

Boston University's undefeated varsity fencing team will meet the New York University fencers in New York tonight in what will probably prove the toughest match of the season for the Terrier swordsmen.

The N. Y. U. team finished second in the Eastern Intercollegiates last year and will be favored to take the Boston boys into camp. Bel in Lavine, Desmond, DiVito and Hartman, the Terriers have a strong quartet of fencers who have downed Boston College, M. I. T. and Bowdoin, and are confident of adding the New Yorkers to their list of victims.

Max Schmeling, who will meet Jack Sharkey in the Milk Fund bout sponsored by Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, is hard at work preparing for the bout which will decide the world championship. Max is shown above working out on the punching bag.

HY DIAMOND TO GET BIG CHANCE

Hy Diamond, product of the Hub newsboy ranks, faces the most glowing opportunity of his ring career when he faces Henry Perlick, one of the noted Kalamazoo twins in one of the 10-round bouts of the double wind-up at the Argonne A. A. show to be staged at Mechanics Building next Thursday night.

In the other 10-rounder, Herman Perlick, the other 20-year-old star will oppose Bruce Flowers, Ebony Phantom of New Rochelle, N. Y.

In meeting Henry Perlick, Diamond gets his first big opportunity in the ring but as he is regarded as one of the most promising boys developed in this section in many years, it is expected that he will keep the Kalamazoo boy busy

After punching his way through the ranks of the preliminary boys here, Diamond has stepped out and taken the measure of every opponent stacked up against him. The time is now ripe for his appearance against the topnotchers and in spite of the fact that Perlick is regarded as one of the most crushing punchers in lightweight ranks Hub fans are certain to back him strongly

H-Y CREW RACE BIG ENTRY LIST ON JUNE 20

New Haven, Ct., March 22 Yale and Harvard settled details for their annual rowing regatta at a conference in this city at which Walter P. Read, general passenger agent of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad and other railroad officials were present with the university representatives.

The regatta has developed from an annual boat race, begun in 1852 and is not only the oldest Yale-Harvard annual athletic series, but the longest series of United States sport contests.

The list of events which have been held yearly on the American Thames at New London will be repeated on Friday, June 20

It was decided to row all four of the formal races of regatta day down stream, although a lengthy discussion preceded the decision to schedule the four-mile varsity event, the chief race of the day, down the river.

The race, as usual will finish at the drawbridge in New London It will be started at 6.30 o'clock, Eastern standard time, with plenty of daylight available on practically the longest day of the year.

The freshmen and junior varsity race will also be rowed down stream over the upper two miles of the course, if this arrangement meets with the approval of William A Meikleham, the veteran referee The freshman race, the first of the morning events, will be started at 8.30 o'clock Eastern standard time, and will be followed almost immediately by the junior varsity race.

Frank Reynolds Goes to Hospital

Frank Reynolds, who retired last January as graduate manager of Boston College athletics, has been sent to the resting hospital in Rutland by his doctor.

This sorry news will grieve the many friends that Reynolds made while directing the athletic fortunes of Boston College from 1920 until his resignation was turned in in November of 1928.

Reynolds is not seriously ill. He was sick while serving in the army and traces of a former illness returned. He was in a run-down condition and the doctor ordered him away for a rest to prevent a possible relapse.

TIGERS PLAY FINAL GAME TONIGHT

HAVING cinched a playoff berth by their tie game with Providence at the Garden Thursday night, the Boston Tigers will finish their regular season at Springfield tonight.

Although nothing is at stake for either team, the Canam champs will use the game to polish up their combination play for the coming games in defense of their title

The Tigers showed their greatest speed of the season in the first period when they scored three goals in the first 12 minutes of play They tired quickly after their strenuous efforts, however, and the Reds took advantage to come from behind and knot the count in the next two periods

Jack Conway Picked Two Out of Three Winners

Jack Conway batted for .666 in picking winners at the show at the Boston Garden.

Johnny Indrisano, named to win the feature bout, disposed of Vince Dundee.

Andy DiNolfi, Conway's selection over Harry Nemis, also came through with flying colors.

The well known dope took it on the chin when Joe Acetta won the decision over Jake Zeramby of Lynn in the other ten.

Conway's 1930 record follows:

FIRST GAME FOR B. C. ON MONDAY

The first baseball game of the season for the Boston College nine will be staged Monday, weather permitting at the University Heights diamond

The Eagles wound up their usual stay at the Commonwealth Armory with a torrid drill and are ready for the first outdoor practice session at the start of next week.

Coach Hugh Duffy announced today that he intended to inaugurate the Regular vs. Yannigan games right off at the start and to continue with this policy, playing two or three games a week, until the first game rolls around on Patriots' Day against Fordham.

Minasian Captain of Tufts Mat Team

The Tufts wrestling team elected Peter Minasian of Kingston, N. Y., as captain of the next year's team Minasian is a sophomore this year and was runner-up in the 175-pound class in the intercollegiate at Tech where he lost the only decision against him this season.

Minasian will represent Tufts in the national intercollegiates to be held at Penn State next week.

Boys' Club Quintet in Hard Game Today

A hard-fought basketball game is expected today when the teams of the New Britain, Conn., Boys' Club and the Boys' Club of Boston meet at the Eben D. Jordan Memorial Gymnasium, Charlestown

The game will be the second of a two-game series between the teams, the first going to the Boston team in a stirring battle in New Britain by the close score of 27 to 24 in a contest that was a thriller from start to finish

Kallig Victor

Cincinnati, O., March 22 Gus Kallig, Finland, won the right to meet Ray Carpenter, Lancaster, O. for the world's championship here, Iowa, in two straight falls in a National Boxing Association official elimination match here.

BOTH BOXMEN IN PERFECT CONDITION

By JOE CASHMAN

PENSACOLA, Fla., March 22 —Large Charlie Ruffing and handsome Milt Gaston are in the best shape of any of the Red Sox pitchers and if all goes well with them for the next three weeks, they will have the honor of pitching the opening games, the exclusive one in Washington on April 14 and the regular one in Boston the following day.

Never before has "Big Tuffy" been in such fine condition in the spring. He is several pounds lighter than at any time since he was a kid in back in 1924, and his arm and general physical condition are perfect.

Joe Cashman

What's more he seems fully determined that will be one of every appearances on the mound, down here, he has worked hard as if a pennant hinged on his efforts.

If he can keep going to prove the great pitcher admirers have always insisted he would become, he ought to do this year.

True he hurled one great ball in the past and had breaks had nothing to do with his failure to win. Few pitchers have been unlucky as a "Big" in the last five years.

But despite his hard luck, he would have met with far more success had he kept in better shape and put more interest in his work.

Ruffing Should Win 20 Games This Season

In his present condition and state of mind we wouldn't be surprised to see him win 20 games this season provided he gets off to a good start and receives a few smiles from Lady Luck.

Ruffing is the most effective of any of the Sox hurlers last year though his won and lost game record wasn't as good as some of his mates.

He hurled great ball from the start to the finish of the campaign.

He should do even better this year for he will have more assistance. He and Jack Russell were the only hurlers in good trim at the start in 1929 with the result that they had to do more work than was good for him.

With Ruffing, MacFayden, Morrie Carroll and Loepbee as well as Russell ready to help him out this spring, Milt expects to have his best season.

None of the Sox hurlers have worked more than six innings to date and it's a safe bet here.

On the two-week trip North, though, they will be called up on to go the full distance. Manager Heinie Wagner intends to have nine-inning pitchers this year and believes the way to get them is to develop them before the season start

He sees no sense in the general custom of not asking a pitcher to go the limit before the race opens.

Ruffing and Morris will get their first taste of the six-inning task in the series with the Pensacola Fliers, who it starts this p m.

Big C" will work this afternoon, with Lisenbee twirling the last three frames.

Tufts Squad Will Work Outdoors

The Tufts battery men will work out in the cage this afternoon and the infielders and outfielders will be given the day off. The cold weather makes it impossible for Ken Nash to take the whole squad outdoors and the outfielders are the only ones who have had much outside work as yet

Indrisano Ready to Meet Mello for N. E. Welter Title

EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

LOCAL BOXER DEFEATS DUNDEE

By JACK CONWAY

YOU can now page Al Mello, New England welterweight champion, for Johnny Indrisano of East Boston.

Indrisano proved he would have an even chance of lifting Mello's title when he defeated Vincent Dundee of Baltimore in a stirring 10 round bout at the Boston Garden.

Jack Conway

Indrisano and Dundee furnished a sizzling battle. The milling was close going into the ninth round. Dundee opened up in this frame and drove Indrisano back under a barrage of body blows.

At the start of the 10th round Dundee was in the lead. Indrisano then made a brilliant rally. Keeping at a terrific clip, he drove left hooks to the body and then lifted his left to the chin. He had Dundee in poor condition during the latter part of the round.

It was Indrisanos rally which won for him the decision.

Matchmaker Alex MacLean announced that Billy Duffy, manager of Indrisano, is prepared to guarantee Jimmy McLarnin $20,000 to meet the East Boston warrior at the Garden on April 23.

DiVodi Stops Nemis in Seven Rounds

ANDY DIVODI of New York won on a technical knockout over Louis Nemis of Halifax in seven rounds.

Four rounds it was a slow fight. Beginning with the fifth frame, DiVodi speeded up. Late in the fifth stanza, DiVodi floored Nemis back under a heavy barrage of blows to the head. At the end before the gong sounded for the end of the frame, DiVodi dropped his opponent to the can. It was a terrific right hand smash to the chin.

Referee Johnny Russell started to count as the gong sounded for the end of the round.

DiVodi continued his brilliant offensive in the sixth frame. He staggered Nemis with short left and right hand belts to the head. His punches opened up wounds over the Halifax boy's eyes.

DiVodi had things all his own way in the seventh frame. At the end of the round Nemis was bleeding freely from cuts over his eyes and from his nose. In his chief second, stopped the contest.

In the other 10-round event, Jack Acetis of Providence got the decision over Jake Zeramby of Lynn. This tussle was slow and was marred by considerable holding.

Ketchel Beats Brown in Slugging Match

STEVE KETCHEL of Haverhill won the decision over Bobby Brown of Lowell in a six-round bout that was jammed with action. The boys stood toe to toe most of the six frames and swapped right hand socks. Ketchel's margin of victory was a narrow one.

Jack McCarthy of Roxbury won from Johnny Milton of Peabody after three rounds of milling. Dick Russell, Milton's chief second, called a halt to festivities at the end of the third frame when his protege was bleeding badly from the nose.

Willie DeAngelis of Revere was awarded the decision over Gus Rugat of Quincy after four rounds.

There was only a slim gathering of fans at the Garden. The gate was $2000.

Al Friedman and Joe Monte will collide in the feature ten-round mill at the North Station sport palace on next Friday night.

45 Out for Husky Baseball Team

Fourteen infielders and 11 outfielders were among the 45 North eastern baseball candidates who reported to Coach Al McCoy at the first outdoor practice.

Twenty batterymates, the majority of whom have been working out daily in the "Y" gymnasium for three weeks, also joined the other forces who participated in a light throwing drill.

Harold Somerville, ineligible pitcher, was the only veteran battleymate to report Monday, the Huskies' only three sports letterman, was the sole member of last year's field relay quartet to put in an appearance. Capt. Warren Nutter, William Carter, Stewart Prosper, William Symonds and Richard Cook, all veterans, were unable to report.

N. E. Billiard Title Play Next Week

After many attempts, the State Theater Club has matched St. Jean of Lowell and Charles Sexton of Lawrence for the New England pocket billiard championship. They have agreed to play 1200 points in 13 blocks of 100 balls on a winner take all basis. The match will start Monday, March 24, and they will play afternoons at 3 and evenings at 7:30.

Kick off—1:30 p. m.

The biggest and most important soccer game in the history of New England will be staged at Battery Park, New Bedford, tomorrow when the Fall River and Bethlehem Steel elevens clash in the replay of their Eastern National cup final. All records for attendance in that section are expected to go by the boards.

The Whalers' pitch will be not only the mecca for New England fans, but they will travel from New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, many from these sections having made reservations.

Last week the teams met at the Polo Grounds and 1 to 1 was the result after two 15-minute extra periods had been played. Experts in the metropolitan district declared it the finest and most brilliant exhibition of the bonting game ever played in this country.

Game Promises to Be Most Thrilling of Season

Fall River concede that they were a trifle lucky to escape defeat in last week's contest, but declare that the team was not at its best, while Bethlehem never reached such heights of individual and collective brilliance.

The confirmed belief is that tomorrow's game will be even more thrilling and more stubbornly contested.

Every yard on the road to the goal will be challenged. Bethlehem, returned from the gruelling contest at the Polo Grounds with three of their stalwarts badly crippled. Archie Stark, Tommy Gillespie and Bill Carnahan.

It was feared that the Steelworkers would be compelled to enter tomorrow's battle minus this trio, but their injuries have yielded to expert treatment and there is hopeful prospects that the same 22 players will renew the struggle for supremacy.

Lineup of Teams Will Be Same as Last Week

There is a report that Sam Mack, veteran of the Fall River eleven, will put Werner "Scotty" Nilsen, former Hub star, in place of Bert Patenaude at left inner.

The popular owner, however, when questioned, stated that the eleven will not be announced until game time.

Nilsen is the most valuable utility man on the Fall River football team and it is very doubtful if the change would help the eleven as an injury to any of the other players would make it necessary to reorganize the team.

BRUINS PLAY MAROON SIX

ing and Dr. Shortell took the Brain man through for the proper physician day in order to find out if the bone was chipped. The X-ray failed to show any breaks, and the surgeon-Dutch's elbow has improved, it is still sore and very troublesome.

Hutchison was bumped around considerably in the first game and was lame and sore at the end. He stated that he felt as though he has just finished the first scrimmage of the season, but he will be back on the job tonight, having been constantly under Win Green's care.

The loss of Seibert will weaken Maroons. The peppery Maroon wing is through for the season according to his own admission. He wrenched his knee in a mix-up with Ted Brown of the rival Otts and owes his retirement to an attempt to kick the Brun.

The Brunswick expect that Maroons will attempt to play the same style of hockey they did in the opening game.

Due to the defensive tactics of the Maroons, the first game failed to produce any real interesting hockey. They played a five and six-man defense at all times, with the forwards guarding their blue line and the defense well up the ice.

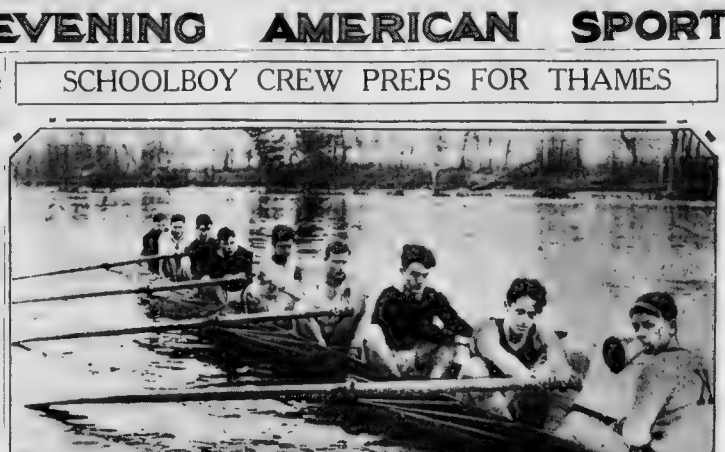
In order to cover Clapper, the Maroons threw their defense to the left and if they follow that plan of attack tonight Dit Clapper is liable to be the outstanding player.

Ross Will Start Barry at Center Tonight

Manager Art Ross will start off with Marty Barry at center, Harry Oliver and Perk Galbraith on the wings. Eddie Shore, who was unable to skate in the first game because of the continual trippings of the Maroons, will pair up with Capt. Fred Hitchman, and Tiny Thompson will be in the net.

Cooney Weiland, Dutch Gainor and Dit Clapper will replace the thunderbolt line after about three minutes of play and then Harry Connor, Bill Carson and Micky Murray will go into action.

SCHOOLBOY CREW PREPS FOR THAMES



This is the Kent school eight of Kent, Ct., which will compete in the 100th anniversary Henley regatta in June. Browne and Nichols won the event a year ago. These young giants promise to be worthy successors. Their average weight is 174. The crew is seated as follows: Ritchie, coxswain; Livingston, stroke; Hinman, No. 7; Herrick, No. 6; Delaney, No. 5; Bates, No. 4; Vance, No. 3; Goodbody, No. 2; Hickok, bow. (I.N.R.)

GLASGOW SIX IN SECOND GAME

The Boston Hockey Club and the New Glasgow Club will play the second game of their two-game series at the Arena tonight. The Glasgow Club defeated the local six, 7 to 6 in an overtime game, in which the winning goal was protested.

Between the periods the play-by-play account of the Bruins' game at Montreal will be announced over the loud speaker.

Tonight's game will probably be the last appearance of Bobby Gladena, Harvard captain, as an amateur player. The brilliant Crimson wingman has been the recipient of several attractive offers to play pro hockey, and can name his own terms with at least a half a dozen clubs should he decide to forsake the amateur ranks.

Those who were denied the privilege of seeing the Harvard-Yale series can avail themselves of the opportunity in tonights game to watch one of the greatest wings that ever played college hockey. His remarkable performances against he high scoring Ding Palmer of Yale stand out among the high lights of college hockey.

Another Hockey Club player who is attracting considerable attention is Sid Silberberg, the former Boston University goalie, whom Herb Reaume is grooming for a pro hockey career.

Otto Sets Two New Duck Pin Records

Waterbury, Ct., March 21 (AP)—Jack Otto, Torrington, Ct., set two new records in the national duckpin tournament here tonight. He shot 532 for a high single mark, better-ing by two pins the old mark set by H. Campbell, Washington, D. C., last year. His 1170 score in the allevents eclipsed the former mark, set by Sam Benson, Washington, D. C., last year by 19 pins.

The Silver Springs, Maryland, five-man team went into second place with a score of 17-14, eight pins behind the Ambassadors of Waterbury.

Whitney Undecided on Easter Hero

London, March 22 (AP)—Until after his final practice gallop a few days hence, it will be impossible to say anything regarding Easter Hero's prospects in the Grand National steeplechase or whether he or Sir Lindsay will carry more confidence, H. H. Whitney told representatives of Sporting Life yesterday.

Jack Anthony, trainer of the American's highly regarded entry, also refused to express an opinion on Easter Hero's prospects, but said Sir Lindsay had "a great chance."

N. E. Golf Title Meet at Portland

At a meeting of the officials of the New England Golf Association, held at the Harvard Club, it was voted to hold the New England championship at the Portland Country Club on August 4, 5 & 6 and 7. According to the calendar this is starting the event at the beginning of the week rather than in the middle as in the past.

It was also decided to hold the qualifying rounds of the National open championship at the Kingsmill Country Club.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

The forward action with the club that we have discussed this week may be a trifle beyond the player who still swings with his body and inside the line, leaves you crowded and cramped for swinging room. Only by swinging the club head down with the hands, and holding the body back, can you get that wide-open area in the hitting sector that results from this action. The left arm is close to your body, not out in front of you, and the club being ahead of your body—seemingly ahead, though in truth it is in unison—has all the room required to swing through and take the ball away. But now note what would happen if you tried to swing straight through the ball, straight through being presumably an effort to make the clubhead follow a line that would go through the ball and directly toward the hole ahead. You could not do that, and to try to do it would spoil an otherwise good swing.

Dempsey Hit Tunney Low

GENE NEVER THOUGHT OF PROTESTING

By DAMON RUNYON

NEW YORK, March 22—"Oo—'ullo, there, Dame, that you?"

The voice came burbling through the receiver, low and hesitatingly, as if far away.

Billy Gibson speaking from a sick bed in the Presbyterian Hospital.

"Yeah, it's me, Bill," I replied, elegantly. "How you comin'?"

"Better, Dame, better. The doctors nerves. Say, I want to tell you a story."

Damon Runyon

It was good to hear his voice again. Report had him in desperate condition not long ago From Mind, Gene Tunney, the man Billy Gibson made a heavyweight champion of the world, was writing to high priced specialists to make sure that his old manager's teetering nerves got a fair break

A gargle of Spanish spattered into the medicos' ears every hour or so, as Senor Paolino Uzcudun, the heavyweight pride of the Basque, demanded news of his new manager. And throughout the world of sport you heard expressions of sorrow for Bill

Hip Blow Shouldn't Be Called a Foul

"I've been reading about that foul business down in Miami, Dame," the voice from the sick bed continued. "It couldn't have been a foul if Scott was hit on the hip That is a foul I mean it shouldn't be called a foul. I didn't think Scott was fouled by Otto von Porat in Madison Square Garden when he got exactly the same kind of a punch he did in Miami. I saw the Garden fight. "You can't properly call a punch to the hip an illegal blow

"Well, anyway, here's the story. After Gene Tunney's second fight with Dempsey in Chicago, we found when he undressed Gene that both his hips were covered with big black and blue contusions painted there by punches landed by Dempsey. And what's more, it was two months before the contusions entirely disappeared

"You mean Tunney was fouled by Dempsey?" I asked

"I mean nothing of the kind, replied "Gib" huskily. "I mean Tunney was well banged about the hips by Dempsey, but the punches were not foul. They were merely lower than the law allows, but they were wholly unintentional, and didn't incapacitate Gene, and for that reason I say you couldn't properly call them foul

"Dempsey's free swinging style of punching for the body sometimes sent many of his blows to a man's hips, but Dempsey never meant them that way," Bill continued. "Dempsey never intentionally hit a man low in his life. But if Tunney had been a constitutional foul squawker he might easily have claimed foul in Chicago."

"How 'bout Philly?" I inquired "Were there any loose and low punches in the fight there?"

"No," said "Gib." "They were all strictly legit."

Dempsey Never Won or Lost on Foul

What the famous old manager of champions says about Dempsey's free and easy style of punching is quite true. It was always the Manassa Mauler's main idea to get 'em in there somewhere in the old Darby Kelly, and if his opponent was trying to knock that left hook down, and inadvertently knocked it into his own hips, why, that was too bad. Too bad for the opponent.

The Mauler hewed close to the waist line and let the leather fall where it might. Yet he won no battles by foul and lost no battles by foul.

It chanced in his fight with Tom Gibbons at Shelby that Thomas often tried to knock the Dempsey hook off and a photograph is in existence showing Dempsey's duke planted right in Gibbons' groin.

Why Tunney Wore White Trunks at Chicago

While Billy Gibson says all the punches chucked around in Philadelphia in the first Dempsey-Tunney fight were legitimate, I happen to know that Tunney took at least one precaution against a possible foul being construed as a fair blow in Chicago.

He was advised by a friend that the lads out West might try to frame him by getting him counted out on a foul blow. How much credence Tunney gave this tale of a plot I do not know, but another friend, one of the best known characters in the boxing game, counseled him to wear white trunks, so that a foul would be apparent to one and all, and it is history that Tunney did wear white.

HARVARD COACH CUTS SQUAD

Mitchell tied the can on candidates for almost every position, retaining a large staff of backs, and pairing down the infield candidates to a minimum This means that Mitch has his 1930 nine pretty well decided upon, and from now on can devote his attention to the first string team.

For twirlers, Mitchell retained a dozen candidates They are Devan, MacHale, Page, Samborski, Davis, Smith, Sidel, Tobe, Vogel, E. D. and A. White and Wyhe

Six catchers were kept after the smoke of the wreckage cleared Ratchelder, Laughlin, Sheiden, Rex, Finke and Richards will continue the fight for the backstop's assignment.

Thirty-eight Harvard ball players survived Coach Fred Mitchell's latest axe waving, and the deleted Crimson squad is now ready to take their practice outdoors as soon as the weather warms up a bit.

Paris, March 22—Mixed professional and amateur tennis matches will not be countenanced by the International Tennis Federation The continental members of the federation unanimously rejected the Anglo-American proposal for such matches

The Americans and British put up a stiff argument for the mixed matches, citing the success of the open golf competitions The continental contingent, however, refused to be convinced that such matches were capable of drawing large gates, and expressed the fear that they would lead to an ultimate difficulty in identifying amateurs from professionals

U. S. BUSINESS ON INCREASE, SAYS EXPERT

Los Angeles, March 22—Business is definitely on the up-grade Unemployment is decreasing Building is unusually active throughout the country

And the man and woman with the buying dollar are steadily spending more, not merely for necessities but for the luxuries that for a brief time felt the pinch of the November stock market flurry

Morton May, president of the May organization, who looks at the business world through the medium of hait a dozen of the nation's biggest department stores, said so

He is in Los Angeles for a 10 day stay, coming from his headquarters in St. Louis

"Conditions are not only getting better—they are better," he said

"The country is definitely over the worst of the slump that followed the stock market crash. And, as a matter of fact, we are finding out that the depression wasn't really as bad as we thought it was until after election day, particularly as regards wholesale and retail business Manufacturers are not only getting better, but the quality is better Metal prices are lower now than they have been since the war, and quality is better The woman who wants a moderate priced gown has a wider choice of better goods than she has had for years—and yet that has been accomplished without hurting either the manufacturer or the retailer."

TWO GUILTY IN 'BOMB TRUST'

Chicago, March 22 (AP)—Two more convictions in the war against the "bomb trusts" were returned by a jury in Judge Otto Kerner's court—making a total of five within the past two weeks

U. S. Highway Bill Encounters a Snag

Washington, March 22 (INS)—The Dowell bill, raising Federal aid for highways from $75,000,000 to $125,000,000 a year was endangered today as a result of a deadlock between Senate and House conference committees

The stumbling block is an amendment added by the Senate raising the amount of the Federal contribution from $15,000 to $25,000 a mile. This proposal was defeated in the House.

350 LINERS IN GERMAN SHIP MERGER

Berlin, March 22 (AP)—Close cooperation between the Hamburg-American and the North German Lloyd Germany's two largest shipping lines, is provided for in an agreement which is described by the press as coming very close to amalgamation of the two companies

The agreement means that the 350 passenger and cargo boats of both concerns totalling more than 2,000,000 tons, will not hereafter compete against each other and the Hamburg-American Line will not be obliged to construct giant liners such as the Bremen and Europa which require enormous capital investment

The entire traffic service of both companies will be organized in such a manner as to eliminate competition between them thereby cutting down expenses and advertising them to compete successfully with foreign shipping lines

The profits of the two companies will be equally divided The Hamburg Americans net profit last year was 11,500,000 marks (about $2,750,000) and the North German Lloyd's was 15,000,000 (about $3,600,000) The dividends declared by the companies were seven per cent and eight per cent respectively

Daily Health Hint for Readers

PERSONS who are subject to "catching cold" should consider whether they are sleeping sufficiently, or eating properly, or exercising enough, or working under sanitary and healthful conditions. Plenty of fresh air is always necessary, but drafts must be avoided.

This Day in History

AN American army of 13,000 men and a naval force, all under command of Gen. Winfield Scott, bombarded Vera Cruz, Mexico, in 1847, and took it four days later. In later years a force, including marines from the Boston navy yard, again captured the city.

ENCHANTING SLIM LINES OF BEAUTY'S ARMS

Avoid Muscular Curves by Slight Exercise

By JOSEPHINE HUDDLESTON,
World Famous Beautician.

IF you are very careful the upper arms can be filled out in nicely rounded contours without gaining a muscular development that will destroy the slim, curved lines that are so enchanting. The first thing to do is to exercise the arms a little each day and then just as soon as they have filled out to the desired lines, to stop the developing form of exercises and do only those that will keep the muscles firm.

Josephine Huddleston

Hold the arms out in front of the body on a level with the shoulders. Clench the hands tightly, with the thumb on the outside of the fist, and then pull the clenched fists back until they touch the tips of the shoulders. Two definite actions must be taken as this exercise is done. The first is the effort to bring the tightly clenched fists back to touch the tip of the shoulders, the second is the resistance that you place in the upper arms to prevent the hands from reaching the shoulders.

It sounds rather like asking you to sit down while standing up, but if the resistance is not placed in the upper arms so that some definite force must be overcome to get tightly clenched hands to the shoulders, the exercise becomes soft and purposeless.

Of course, you mustn't make the resistance in the upper arms so great that the hands can't win, but you must make it hard for them to reach their goal.

When the hands reach the shoulder tips, relax your grip and then extend the arms again and reclench the hands. Inhale deeply while bringing the hands to the shoulders, and exhale when you relax. Repeat 10 times. Then hold the arms out at the sides on an even line with the shoulders and repeat the same movement. Do this exercise 10 times, too.

In addition to the exercise, massage a liberal amount of the nourishing cream (formula given below) over the arms at night and let what little remains on after the massage stay there overnight.

The nourishing cream with help to build out the arms and to keep the muscles from becoming unduly rigid.

Equal parts of lanolin, cocoa butter and mineral oil are used for the nourishing cream and you can either have it made up at the druggists or you can buy the ingredients there and make it yourself.

If you prepare it yourself I would suggest that you buy the exact amount you want of each ingredient and in this way your proportions will be accurate.

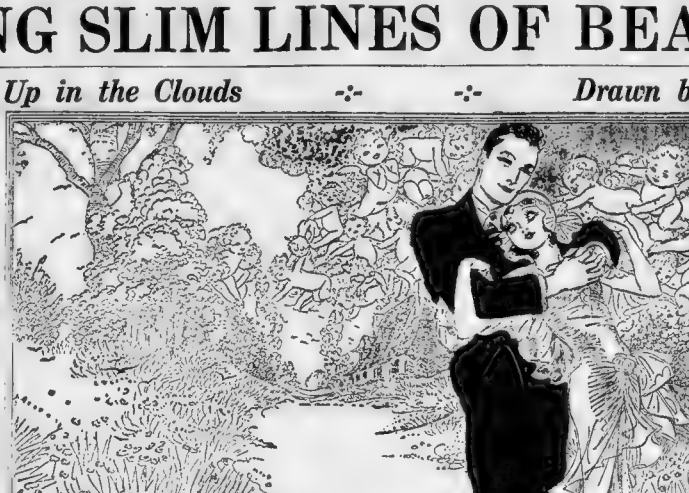
Let us assume that you purchase two ounces of lanolin, two ounces of cocoa butter and two ounces of mineral oil. This amount will make sufficient cream to last quite a little time.

You will note that the cocoa butter is hard, the lanolin sticky and the mineral oil, of course, is in heavy liquid form. These ingredients may become scorched.

Melt the cocoa butter and the lanolin and heat the mineral oil, then pour the lanolin into a suitable container, add the cocoa butter and the mineral oil, and then blend the three ingredients thoroughly, using an egg or cream beater. The blending must continue without stopping until the liquids begin to congeal which will not be until they cool. You can place the jar containing the liquid in a pan of cold water, however, and this will speed the cooling process.

This highly nourishing cream can be used on any parts of the body with beneficial results.

Up in the Clouds -:- -:- Drawn by Nell Brinkley



"The lunatic, the lover, and the poet,
Are of imagination all compact."
—Shakespeare.

LOVERS walk in a world of airy shapes. They, like the lunatic—some sour-grapes persons say "lunatic" and "lover" are one and the same thing—see what is not there, but unlike him, they see only lovely forms. Like the poet they can people the world out of nothing, with unearthly beauties and all the mobs of fairyland. Like him they see the world of nature a living pattern.

Children, lying on their backs in the purple and green bloom 'of an alfalfa field, see creatures and beasts, cities and spirit women, not clouds—floating in the sky. Shapes that change magically. A vast elephant drifts into a woman with flying hair. Lovers are children, too. They see in the clouds a host of living shapes. But with them it is like this: There are no creatures and beasts, no cities and spirit women. Only one shape, repeated, over and over, into a restless host; the white figure of a cherub, slightly touched with rose and gold. One cherub, love, multiplied over and over like the myriad bubbles on the sea.

Where you see but piled-up, creamy clouds gilded and flushed with the sun, the lovers see a million images of Eros with his pale gold hair and rosy hands.

That lunatic and poet, the lover, sees the world through conjured eyes. Do not pity him because for a time in his life, of feverish bliss, he does not see the mud-holes of the world, or even clouds as just plain masses of suspended water.

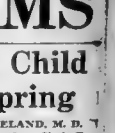
'The artist, though on the whole one of the luckiest of the world, is less happy than the lover, for he sees the world, at times, like a lunatic, a poet, and a lover —all three'

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Dress Child for Spring

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.
U. S. Senator from New York, Former Commissioner of Health.

I AM writing this on a railway train with snow all around and the thermometer standing below zero. The sun is bright but it fails to melt the sparkling snow a single particle.



Dr. Copeland

But by the time this article reaches the public, it will be springtime in parts of our country and approaching it in others. It will appear at a season when the young mother must exercise unusual care to watching over the welfare of her baby.

It is puzzling to know just how to dress the youngster on these first warm days. Perhaps one day will be cool and windy, rare need. The next may be bright and almost balmy. What should he done about the outer garments?

A baby ought to be out-of-doors three or four hours every day when it does not rain or snow. But of course there are two periods, morning and afternoon outings, so the mother does not get far from home. In the event of a sudden change in weather, it will be possible to get into the house almost immediately.

There are certain devices which every home where a baby is, should never be without. There should be a set of scales and at least one thermometer, one outside the window where it will be as a guide to the mother. By consulting the thermometer she will know how warmly the baby should be dressed.

May I say in passing that rain does not do away with the importance of an improvised outing. The infant should be wrapped up and placed in its carriage, which is drawn up in front of an open window.

It is a mistake to dress the baby so warmly that it perspires. To do so is to invite trouble. The best form of which is chafing and chapping of the skin. Dampness of the intimate garments next to the skin is as cold and that, in turn, might be the beginning of bronchitis or pneumonia.

I know what sacrifices are required to purchase the elaborate wardrobe a baby now has. If it is to be protected properly during the changeable weather of springtime. But it is not safe to dress it in any weight of outside clothing. There must be lighter garments as well as heavy ones.

It is important to keep in mind that the warm sun will make up its milder weather for what the heavy cloak and sweater may seem to rob the child on cold days. By exercising common sense in the dressing, the helpless infant will be spared much suffering. More than this, it may be spared serious illness.

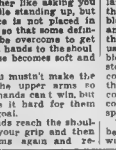
Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

HAVE YOU LEARNED TO MAKE UP YOUR MIND?

DID you have a terrible time trying to decide whether you'll buy the blue hat or the brown, Mary? Do you get all rattled when they try to rush your vote on some business problem, Bill? Are you always choosing the wrong plan, picking the wrong place, and then wishing you hadn't?



Elsie Robinson

Probably, if you're the average human, you are. And it's also possible that you think that difficult decisions are just a regular part of the pesky business of living. They aren't. Making decisions shouldn't be a burden to any adult. We can learn to decide quickly without dawdling or friction or fuss, just as we can learn to walk or talk or use our hankies

WHY does it bother you to make decisions? Because part of you is still a baby. A baby never knows what to grab. First he wants the red ball. Then he wants the yellow ball. And, which ever he gets, he promptly wants the one he didn't. And generally ends up in a tantrum.

A baby can't help being that way. All the little mammals before him were that way. He's just starting to be human. He can't think like a man yet . . . he thinks like a mammal, in circles. Chases his feelings around like a puppy chases his tail. But he can be educated out of that, just as he can be educated into any other form of civilized practice.

You would have been saved endless trouble, perhaps much tragedy, in your personal life if you had been taught how to make up your mind. And you can save your child that same trouble and tragedy if you'll teach him to make up his mind, right from the jump.

MAKE your youngster make up his mind, from the time he has a mind to make up. Make him choose between the red ball and the yellow orange and then make him abide by his decision. Don't give him the red ball if he yells for it, after choosing the yellow orange. Make him accept the consequences of his own choice for in no other way, can he ever learn to make the right choice.

Make him make up his own mind and let him make up his own mind. You won't be hurt or bothered by his silly choices. But second-hand wisdom is as valueless to him as it is to you. Both you and he need to buy your own experience. We never learn what to pick, unless we pay the bill.

When to Wear Tuxedo

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Kindly inform me if a Tuxedo is considered formal evening attire for gentlemen? If not, what is? V. M. S.

A Tuxedo suit—the dinner jacket is not formal evening attire. The tail-coat is formal evening dress for gentlemen. With a Tuxedo a man wears a black tie; with the tail-coat he wears a white tie.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—What is the proper pronunciation of "Musicale"?

2—Should such dishes as creamed celery, or creamed cauliflower, when served in a separate saucedish, be eaten with a teaspoon or fork?

3—How should one word a letter to a friend accepting his or her invitation to a party (boy and girls of seventeen to twenty)?

4—When is it correct to wear a Spanish shawl? GRACE.
Brookline.

1—Mu, with the u pronounced like you; si, with the s having the sound of z; kal, with the a having the sound of a in ask.

2—With a fork, whenever possible. However, if there is a liquid sauce that suggests a spoon for its appreciation, naturally we would use a spoon. Nowadays, however, it is the tendency to serve vegetables dry, that is, without a thin sauce. And individual sauce-dishes are becoming obsolete. It is now considered far better service to serve vegetables on the plate with the meat.

3—If the invitation came in the form of a written note, this would be an appropriate answer:

Dear Mary:

It was most kind of you to ask me to your party on Friday, the first of May, at nine o'clock, and I shall be most glad to come.

Best wishes always, and anticipation of the first.

Devotedly,
GRACE.

4—When you are wearing an evening dress or a dinner dress on an occasion when the temperature does not demand a warmer evening wrap. Summer-time is the most convenient season for them, usually. They are awkward to wear under an evening coat. Often they are worn to dinner at a hotel at which one is, say, stopping in the summer.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

At a dinner dance, or when one is called from the table, what should one do with one's napkin? Some one told me it should be left on the chair, but have never noticed many people doing that.

WONDERING.

Your napkin should be left "as is" on the left of your plate, at a dinner-dance or when you are called from the table.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

Lovejoy, by Beatrice Burton

CHAPTER 61

"IS that so?" Lovejoy was like a drowning woman clutching at a straw. She did not stop to realize that the childless Sheila probably knew less about babies than she herself knew about them. "Are you sure that's so, Sheila?"

Steve opened the door.

"The first train you can get leaves Los Angeles at 8 in the morning," he said. "Suppose you pack your things, Lovejoy, and I'll drive you down there. The ride will do you good and you can go to a hotel for what's left of the night by the time we get there."

"That's an inspiration, Steve!" Sheila agreed eagerly. "If the poor Infant stays here, doing nothing, she'll lose her mind. You help her pack her things and I'll make some coffee and put a thermos jug of it in the car."

It did not take Lovejoy long to pack up her belongings. Most of her clothes were at the Hill ranch in Nevada where she was supposed to be while she established her legal residence there.

By half past ten she was ready to start.

Sheila had put pillows and a blanket into the back seat of the car, and slipped a thermos bottle of coffee into each of the side pockets.

"You may want to sleep on your way down to Los Angeles," she said. "You've been up since the crack of dawn."

But Lovejoy never had been farther from sleep in her life.

Her head was clear as a bell. Twice as clear as it had been during the last days back home when she had been trying to make up her mind what to do about the baby. . . . She could see now what she ought to have done about him.

"I thought that he'd be better off at home with Aunt Em," she said thoughtfully as the car slipped down the slope of the hills into the streets of Santa Barbara. "I hated the thought of having him with me in hotels where his crying might have disturbed people. It's so hard to fix bottles of milk and orange juice for a baby, too, unless you're at home in your own kitchen—"

"Hush! You did the right thing when you left him with your Aunt Em," Steve interrupted her gently. "If you'd tried to bring him out here with you your husband would have kicked up no end of a fuss. Besides that, the trip would have been hard on the baby. It was much better to do just what you did."

But Lovejoy shook her head firmly.

"If Tommy had been with me he wouldn't have had birthday cake to eat! You remember the night at the ranch when we talked to Aunt Em and she told me she had given him 'just a tiny bit' of cake? You remember how it worried me, Steve?—And now I'm sure that it was the beginning of this sickness of his—" She broke down again, her face against the sleeve of his coat, dampening it with her tears.

"Please don't cry, dearest," she heard him say. "Everything's going to be all right. You go home and get him, Lovejoy, and bring him out here. While you're gone I'll rent some kind of a house for you in Minden and get a nurse who can take care of him for you—"

"No, no, no!" sobbed Lovejoy. "If he gets well I'll never let anybody even touch him again! I never should have let anybody take care of him!—But I was a bad mother—"

Crying, she fell asleep at last with her head pillowed on Steve's shoulder and his arm around her holding her close.

She slept until 3 o'clock, when they drove into Los Angeles and came to a stop before the hotel.

A sleepy doorman came to lift her bags out of the car.

Steve's face was white and haggard that morning when he said goodby to her in the stuffy drawing room on the train.

"Lovejoy," he said, holding her hands so tight that the new ring with its enormous stone cut into her flesh, "promise me that you'll come back to me!"

"Of course, I'll come back to you." There was no other thought in her mind. "No matter what happens I'll come back. You know that, Steve."

She put her arms around his neck and kissed him goodby.

The long ride home was a nightmare and a horror to Lovejoy.

Twice the porter brought telegrams from Aunt Em to her.

"Baby just the same," one of them read.

"No change in baby, doctor says," the second one told her.

Well, that was something, at any rate. . . . Tommy was holding his own, at least.

There was no one at the station to meet her.

That was odd she thought. And yet who was there who could be expected to meet her? Aunt Em surely would not leave the baby. And Tom and Norris Shane would hardly come to the train to welcome her.

Good to Eat

I MAKE no apology for what some people consider a plebeian liking for Onion Soup au Gratin.

Martha Lee

It's comforting to know that this taste is shared with many who consider themselves real epicures, and it is pretty hard to deny that Onion Soup is economical, healthful and delicious.

ONION SOUP AU GRATIN
INGREDIENTS.

3 onions
2 tbsps. butter
1 qt. hot soup stock
3 crusty rolls
1 cupful grated Parmesan cheese.

METHOD:

Slice the onions very fine and fry golden brown in butter, keeping well covered. Then add to hot soup stock well-seasoned and boil five minutes.

Slice the crusty rolls very thin and toast in the oven until hard and dry. Pour the soup into a casserole or serving dish, arrange the toast slices on top and cover with a cupful of grated Parmesan cheese.

Then place in a hot oven or under a low broiler flame until the cheese has melted and puffed up to an appetizing brown. Smart restaurants often serve this soup in attractive individual casseroles—petit marmites

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

BOTH SIDES OF THE LOVE-GAME

LOVE-MAKING is an art, for which many a boy of 20 shows a natural genius, while many a seasoned worldling never seems to master its simplest rudiments.

Getting married is, to a woman, a premeditated felicity; but a man must be in an awfully reckless mood to get any joy out of his own wedding.

IT WOULDN'T be so bad if a flapper would simply steal your husband and be done with it; but this continually "borrowing" him and then returning him is what gets on a wife's nerves.

Synthetic love starts in the pocket-flask and makes the head go 'round, real love starts in the head and makes the heart go 'round.

Perjury becomes second nature to a woman, after a few years of household economy. If she isn't hiding from a penurious husband how much she's spending, she's trying to a spendthrift husband about how much she's saving

The modern youth appears to spend almost as much time and energy thinking up ways to discourage the women as his father spent in devising ways to win them.

A WOMAN'S love is never dead, until she gets tired of "forgiving" a man, and begins learning to forget him.

A man who will calmly and bravely face a burglar who points a gun at him will run like a frightened deer from a woman who laughs at him.

"Don't be so Scotch! Go on—talk more about me!"

He laughed, his eyes caressing her.

"Vain little glutton! Well you've really been a great nuisance. If you want the truth. You've been in my thoughts constantly since Sunday."

"Even last night?" That was a mistake. The girl could have bitten her tongue.

A shadow slipping into his eyes, turning them nearly black. His brows leveled. "Last night?"

She gulped. Nothing for it but to see it through. "Oh," she said lightly, "I get all the gossip now that Jeanette's opened the smoke-eries! Her sister Cecile was in today . . . I heard her say that—that you were with her last night."

She could not read his expression. She suffered an agony of embarrassment as his eyes went to his watch.

Ardeth rushed into speech, struggling to be casual

"She's very attractive . . . isn't she? Such an unusual type—different from Jeanette"

Ah, please don't be so remote' her heart was crying. What had made her say that! It was unforgivable—it was paying! She had no right . . . but oh, this burning jealousy of Cecile . . .

"Yes, Cecile is attractive," he said at last.

A constraint underlying their evening. As though a cloud had passed over the sun, thought the saddened girl.

Obediently she lifted her lashes. Startling to find his face poised a few inches above her own. His eyes—wide—intent, growing out of the dark.

A funny little shake in his voice, as though he spoke against his will Hungry for you, sweetheart . . . just plain starved' I couldn't stay away another day."

She hardly heard his words. Her heart was throbbing an undertone which turned each drop of blood in her veins to sparkling golden wine. Her eyes closed as their lips met and her arms crept about Ken's neck, drawing his face closer.

Wants Early Marriage

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My girl friend and I had planned to be married this spring. But her family will not be able to give her a wedding until six months later. She wishes to wait. My preference is for an immediate marriage. Surely a wedding is not important.

JOSEPH.

TO you and to many others, Joseph, including almost all brides-grooms, a wedding doesn't seem important. The simplest form of legal marriage would satisfy you. Take it, and you find it hard to wait six months for the charming young person to appear under a bridal veil and all the pretty customary properties promises to delay your happiness for that length of time. Nevertheless, I advise you to allow your fiancee to have her way. If she does not have all that she has been deprived of the greatest day in her life. Make this sacrifice for her so that you may start your married life without a regret.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

Do you think that a girl's mother ought to act like a young girl and dress like one? I am 17 years old and my mother is 36, which is certainly old enough to stay at home and be dignified. But she goes out and dances nearly every night. I should like a real mother.

LONELY.

I FEEL deeply sympathetic toward any young person who doesn't receive all the love and attention from her mother that she needs. But are you sure that it is really your case, Lonely? Or are you perhaps a little over-serious yourself? And you could wonder, that you feel a funny little critical feeling toward your mother because she is popular and likes good times? After all, my dear, your mother is still a young woman, and nothing is more natural than to enjoy dancing at any age—even at 90! And a woman who faithfully discharges all her family duties is entitled to harmless recreation.

CONSTRUCTION GAINS ARE EVIDENT

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Along with the giant automotive industry, construction is closely watched as a leading 'business index.' New England figures are encouraging. They show directional gains over the weekly average for the year to date, as of the latest report. Previous current reports had shown slight gains

As stated in the financial section of the Boston Evening American yesterday, "For the first time this year new building contracts awarded in New England for the week were reported today far above the weekly average for the year. The total for the week ended March 15, announced by F. W. Dodge Corp., was $7,865,400. The weekly average for 1930 to date is $4,413,200."

New England offers the figures to show improvement, but the betterment is not confined to this section. McGraw-Hill's 'Business Week' says "building is definitely on the upswing, and open weather will bring increased opportunities for outdoor work and greater demands upon many lines of industry. Federal and local governments are closely watching for those things to push public work, which is already at the highest level in years. With commodity prices evidently nearing their bottom, the wholesale dollar nearly 10 cents above par, and money offered for a song, it should not be long before business generally will feel inclined to take a chance and join in the more cheerful chorus which the stock markets is leading."

"President Trowbridge Callaway of the Investment Bankers Association of America this week brought to Boston an objection to existing habits of announcing sales of bonds that appears well founded. He says the association is opposed to the announcement that bonds have been sold," when it is simply meant they have been distributed among dealers. He thinks that the announcement should be held back until actual distribution has been accomplished.

* * *

Whatever individual views on this subject may be, it is probably a fact that a very large majority of all bonds ever issued anywhere in the United States is sold through the members of President Hallaway's association.

* * *

In the current issue of practically all the leading magazines in the woodworking and lumber industry over the name of the National Association of Manufacturers of Woodworking Machinery George H. Corliss, advertising manager of the S. A. Woods Machine Co. of Boston, has attempted to boil down into three small lines all the virtues of the best mechanising minds of the country into "A New Era in Woodworking Industry—For Any Woodworking Industry." These are:

1—Study the changing trends of the public.

2—Operate only the most modern cost-cutting methods.

3—Produce what the public wants when it wants it.

Industrial production will experience a spring revival which, while not nearly as pronounced as that witnessed in 1929, will nevertheless be of fairly substantial proportions, concludes the Standard Statistics Company, of New York, in a current survey.

* * *

"Automobile factory operations are now definitely on the upgrade and should attain quite considerably higher levels in March and April than in the two preceding months," says the survey. "With the advent of open weather, activities in the building construction trades also should register noticeable expansion. Steel output, which lately has contracted somewhat, should renew its advance before the end of this month, and in April is likely to be larger than in any month of the first quarter.

With a billion in new financing planned for the near future, as shown by a Journal of Commerce survey, it is evident that there is plenty of confidence back of the security markets. Boston & Maine's decision to push its bond offering came as a surprise in State st. The move is expected to enable the big New England carrier to take advantage of the fact that a large amount of funds now lies awaiting employment.

March Promises to End Better Than It Began

Why You Cannot Borrow at Low Rates Quoted in Wall Street

—By B. C. FORBES—

B. C. Forbes

NEW YORK, March 22—March's farewell promises to be cheerier than its debut. Business appears to be a trifle more buoyant, employment is declared to be picking up at least slightly, farm prices have stopped hitting new lows, money rates have steadily declined in leading centers, while Wall Street is doing its best to dispel the gloom of winter and to celebrate the arrival of spring.

Many outside of Wall Street are puzzled when they read that days-to-day, or call, loans are being made in New York at such quotations as 2 per cent, and even 1½ per cent, and that time money is freely offered at 3½ to 4 per cent. They themselves, when they try to borrow money, are asked to pay very much higher rates.

This extract from one out-of-town letter is typical: "I would like to know where you can get some of the 'cheap' money you financial writers are writing about. I have been paying 6 per cent on a loan secured by plenty of good New York Stock Exchange collateral and have been compelled to maintain a 30% balance in my account. I have talked this matter over with a banker friend and he tells me that the banks in New York, particularly the larger ones, have loads of money, but loans it only to people who keep large balances. He also says that his own bank is still paying 5½ per cent to a New York bank.

"I am sure thousands of people would like to know how you have done and where they can get this 'cheap' money to buy homes, and so on, which the government really wants people to do to aid prosperity. Send someone to one of your large New York banks and try to get a loan at the rates quoted in the daily newspapers and see the result."

I can sympathize entirely with the writer. Having occasion to renew a demand loan the other day, one bank voluntarily reduced the rate per cent to 5½ per cent, but when I asked another bank, where I was paying 6 per cent, to make a reduction, I was told that the banks were anxious to reduce their collateral loans and that the 6 per cent rate would have to stand. It still stands.

The money rates quoted in New York, it should be explained, apply to large borrowers, usually brokers. Call loans—so named because they are carry big accounts with their banks.

The lowest rates quoted for time money—so named because the money is borrowed for a specified time, anywhere from 30 days to six months also represent Wall st transactions, and do not represent rates charged by banks to their quality borrowers of moderate amounts.

Anyone doing business with a broker need not expect to be charged the minimum rates quoted daily. It is well known that brokers figure on making a profit on the rates they charge their customers. The borrow by the wholesale, so to speak, and lend at retail. They claim that it is perfectly legitimate for them to charge a profit for this service.

At a time like this banks throughout the country should exert themselves to do everything possible to encourage new home building but every other healthy form of enterprise and activity. The employment thus created is very direly needed.

Turn about is fair play. Europe has been invaded by American motor manufacturers. Now the tiny Austin car, so popular in Britain, is to be manufactured at Butler, Pa. It will have only seven horsepower, contrasted with Ford's 24 and Chevrolet's still higher figure. Whether Americans will take to these "perambulators," as they are sometimes called abroad, remains to be seen.

I understand that merger negotiations between the Dollar Line and the American-Hawaiian Line have now reached a decisive stage and that the big deal is likely to go through. But it has not yet been signed and sealed.

American shipping is enjoying an encouraging revival after its long discouraging spell. The current here, as in other industries, is flowing strongly toward combinations. The prize will doubtless bring important developments.

It is not too late to find attractive investments in both bonds and stocks.

BOND MARKET CHANGES ARE NARROW

By JOHN L. COOLEY

New York, March 22 (AP)—The bond market fluctuated narowly today in a quiet Saturday session. Gains of the present week were easily maintained by the pivotal investment issues, which held very firm, especially in the railroad group.

Sales of New York Stock Exchange bonds in this week of soaring prices totaled approximately $115,000,000, a new high for more than two years. The curb's list has also been extremely active, while dealings in unlisted securities, which account for a heavy majority of the bond trading, reached almost phenomenal proportions.

With a period of easy money generally expected despite the weekend advance from 3½ per cent level, there was no disposition to unload recent purchases today and prices were virtually unchanged.

Pennsylvania Gold 5s, Northern Pacific prior lien 4s, New York Central Lines refunding 4½s, Santa Fe General 4s, Canadian Pacific 4s and Rock Island and Chesapeake & Ohio 4½s displayed marked firmness.

Boston & Maine 5s took a spurt of about a point. A $15,000,000 issue of first mortgage 5s by this road is expected early next week. Seaboard soared nearly 4 points and Seaboard all Florida 6s advanced 3½, in the trend toward speculative and semi-speculative industrials brought fair gains to numerous issues. Investment utilities were quiet and steady. Convertibles made small changes.

PROFIT-TAKING ON BIG CURB

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER

New York, March 22 (AP)—The curb market was depressed by heavy week-end profit-taking today after the phenomenal gains of the past several days. There was a feeling among traders that the technical position of the market had been weakened by the recent advance.

A few shares managed to move against the downward trend, notably some of the Standard Oil issues. Standard of Indiana and Jersey both reached new high levels for the year, and Standard of Kentucky made moderate headway.

Humble, a subsidiary of Standard of New Jersey, however, fell back more than 5 points, and Vacuum, which has arranged to merge with Standard of New York, but is owned as an affiliate of Jersey, was one of the leaders among the so-called independents, lost 3½.

American Gas & Electric receded nearly 3 points, and Electric Bond & Share 2. Hydro Electric lost 1 point and Consolidated Gas Supervower 1½. The United Gas issues, however, held steady.

Goldman Sachs lost a point.

Industrials generally lost ground. Among the high-priced issues Aluminum Company dropped 16 points. In the low-priced group Dubilier, which sold earlier in the week above 12, dropped below 10. Crocker Wheeler and American Cyanamid each lost about a point.

EMPLOYMENT IS DOUBLED

Springfield, March 22—President Norman T. Bowden of the Indian Motocycle Co. says: "Employment by the company is at a rate substantially twice the average of the last quarter of 1929.

"Production of motorcycles in our factory recently was equivalent to one-third of the entire production of November, 1929, with a production record having been established which had not been reached by this company since 1925."

Steel Merger Fight Begins on Proxy Lines Today

Youngstown, O., March 22 (AP) After today the proposed consolidation of the Bethlehem Corporation and the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Company will be fought out on proxy lines alone. Stock transfer books of Sheet & Tube close at 1 p. m. and after that time stock transferred cannot be voted at the stockholders' meeting April 5, which will determine whether Bethlehem is to become a billion-dollar corporation. The fight for proxies, however, is expected to become even more strenuous as the time grows shorter.

NEW HOME FOR BOSTON BANK

On Monday, March 24, the Boston National Bank will move its home office from its old location on Hanover st, and will occupy the entire five-story building at the corner of Washington and Hanover sts. This building has been completely remodelled to meet the requirements of this young bank which during the past eight years has had a phenomenal growth.

The exterior of the building is attractively finished in granite and brown sandstone, with handsome bronze doors facing on both Hanover and Washington sts.

The street floor interior has marble flooring, mahogany tables and benches for customers, and the various tellers' and discount windows are protected by heavy bronze grill mounted on the black marble counter that runs the entire length of the banking room. The walls are decorated in ivory and gold.

Modern vaults, elevators and various safety devices have been installed, as well as safe deposit boxes and coupon rooms for box patrons.

The second floor will be used for directors' and officers' rooms and for the president's private office.

The third floor will be used as the main office of the bank where the many details of its several branches will be started for.

The Boston National Bank started business in 1921 with a capital of $200,000. In August, 1929 its capital was $625,000. Its total resources today are over $7,000,000, and it has approximately 21,000 depositors.

The Boston National Bank has branch offices at Essex and Chauncy sts., Boston; Blue Hill ave. and Woodrow ave., Dorchester; Pine Hill ave. and Otisfield st., Roxbury.

The bank is a member of the Federal Reserve System. It has shown a steady yearly increase in deposits since 1921. Its present list is composed of a substantial number of well-known business and professional men of Boston.

Massachusetts Tercentenary, 1930

TAKE a look at the "Worcester" depot as it looked some 50 years ago. A lot of youngsters don't know that this was the starting place of the Boston & Worcester Railway trains. The B. & W. afterwards became, with other lines, the Boston & Albany, now leased to the New York Central. This depot stood on the block formed by Albany, Beach, Lincoln and kneeland (New Stuart) streets. The site is now occupied by the Albany Building, devoted to leather goods.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

LARGEST EVENING
CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

Give Us the Elevator

Legislature Should Act Quickly to Aid Boston Port

GOVERNOR ALLEN'S call to the Legislature, following the suggestion of Mayor Curley, asking the State lawmakers to establish a modern grain elevator in South Boston, is the first move of real consequence in the effort to restore the Port of Boston to its rightful place as an Atlantic shipping point.

We have only to go back to a few years before our participation in the World War to find Boston served for passenger and freight by many lines of steamers and big vessels at that. These vessels made Boston a TERMINUS and the passenger business as well as the freight was profitable.

Cargo, however, is necessary to the operation of any steamship line, and the grain shipments that formed the base for all these vessels gave them a foundation on which they built all their other business. In 1915 there was shipped from Boston 16,700,000 bushels of grain. Last year this had fallen off to less than 4,000,000. This tells the story. Get back this business and Boston will thrive as a port.

A modern grain elevator, such as is suggested, would contribute enormously to the expansion of commerce here.

The Governor has asked the committee on metropolitan affairs to act promptly in providing for a study of the question by the Boston Port Authority and the Department of Public Works. Study by all these bodies should produce a report to the present session of the Legislature, the Governor thinks.

Boston's wharfage facilities are second to none, and as has been repeatedly stated, we are nearer to all the great ports of the world than New York, Baltimore or Philadelphia.

With the right sort of effort it should again be possible to see any day six or eight ocean liners tied up at Boston wharves profitably handling business flowing through this port.

15,000 Cots

Plenty of Legion Boys Ready to Sleep on Them.

BOSTON'S biggest convention for this year is thus early making plans for its gathering in October. The American Legion is making sure that it will have plenty of accommodation for the thousands of legionnaires who are expected to attend. In addition to all the hotel and other rooming space, the convention committee is to provide 15,000 cots for the proper care of the boys. They have asked through Representative Andrew for a loan of an equipment from the War Department in Washington. The granting of this request should be the merest form.

Meantime the Boston committee having the matter in charge is going forward with its other preparations, considering March none too early to prepare for October. Of the hundreds of conventions that are coming to the Hub this year, none will get a warmer welcome than the American Legion.

City Seeks Its Due

Not at the Expense of Innocent Water Users, However.

THE Boston Water Department has wisely refrained from indiscriminately shutting off the water supply from Boston houses in which water bills have not been paid.

Tenants should not be deprived of water when the full responsibility is on the owner of the building. In the past there have been several instances of shutting off water where it has seemed to us that tenants have been harshly dealt with. Mayor Curley's instructions to the Water Department in the present instance are wise. Only delinquent owners who occupy property will be proceeded against drastically at first. Afterward a proper way will be found to get the city's due. Water bills owed Boston should be collected, but not at the expense of innocent occupants of the property.

Modesty and Heroism

Haverhill Discovers Adams

HAVERHILL has discovered its hero. Charles E. Adams is the man who risked his life to save a man who jumped into a Haverhill pond to drown. Both men were swept through an underground culvert. Those who waited at the culvert's end to receive what they expected to be two dead men saw Adams drag the other man ashore. While police were taking care of the attempted suicide, Adams modestly disappeared. No one knew him and it took police work to find him. Real heroism is always modest. Adams is a real hero.

Money Isn't Everything

And Some Believe It

WORK was started on a dam out West the other day. The contractor advertised for labor and 300 men applied for jobs—as timekeepers. Every one refused to handle a pick and shovel.

The contractor thinks this sheds light on the unemployment situation, and maybe it does. But it sheds more on human nature.

Many men and women would rather starve on a white collar job than prosper as manual laborers. And a good many do. Which makes you wonder if the "economic interpretation of history" is all that it's cracked up to be.

Pleasant Work

And Good Pay

(Copyright, 1930)

NOT that it is important, but there are 200 applications on file at Sing Sing for the job of State executioner.

Rates are $150 per execution, and the work is easy—that is, physically.

It would be interesting to look into the heads of these applicants, if you could, and see what's inside. Also to compare them with the heads of the criminals who go to the chair.

If there was any difference, it would probably be in favor of the criminal. He usually kills in hot blood, or because he is "hopped up" to it.

Killing in cold blood at regular rates and without risk to himself might seem to him unworthy of a self-respecting slayer.

H. G. Wells Writes on "The Science of Life"

In Collaboration With Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells

BUT it should be remembered that these direct preservations of the material of extinct creatures are the rarest accidents. Most fossil, for any dug-up trace of an organic being is called a fossil, are not actual surviving bits of corpses at all, but bits of corpses which have been changed into rock by a slow translation and replacement.

They are copies at second hand of the original writing. As the bones or other enduring fragments lie buried they slowly dissolve away and are replaced more or less completely by mineral substances, in a word they are "petrified."

In this process, of course, they undergo varying degrees of distortion although in one or two exceptional cases the translation is astonishingly accurate, each little difference of texture in the original being faithfully reflected in the mineralized fossil.

The record may be even more indirect than that; it may be a dried footprint or the hollow impress of a bit of skin or a shell. From these scattered and accidental remains the palaeontologist patiently reconstructs his picture of the world as it used to be.

Occasionally a lucky chance makes us realize how scanty our information really is.

In California, for instance, a pool of water with sticky marginsis impregnated with tar proved a death-trap to thousands of creatures as they came down to drink, and to hordes of carnivorous mammals, like wolves and saber-toothed tigers, which endeavored to catch the drinkers when they stuck fast. Now the palaeontologist finds a hoard of treasure in that one pool.

In France, in the drought of 1911, it was noted that all the fish in a pool burrowed into the mud when the water dried up, and were eventually baked hard in their hundreds. Unless the geologists of future ages happen to hit on such a patch of trapped life, they are not likely to find more than isolated bones of these kinds of fish.

Almost the only complete

skeletons of the extraordinary giant reptile, iguanodon, are those of a whole troop, 29 of them, old and young, which were found in a Belgian cave, obviously entombed by some accident.

Fossil ants, we note, are often found in amber. Amber is the fossilized gum which once exuded as resin from long decayed pinetrees.

Only an insignificant fraction of the ant population of the world gets trapped in resin, and only an insignificant fraction of the resin is hardened and preserved as amber; and yet almost all our knowledge of the ants of the past is derived from specimens in amber.

The amount of detail preserved to us is also very much a matter of luck. As a rule, nothing survives but the skeleton, and even that may be distorted and sometimes partly rotted. Now and again, however, happy accidents have caused traces of the softer parts to survive to our day.

For example, one or two specimens of the strange, duck-billed dinosaur, trachodon, in the Upper Cretaceous (IV C 3), died and fell on a patch of soft mud.

They decayed and the place where they had been became covered with sand. But the mud beneath held the impression of their skins with surprising fidelity—so that now we have the form of their skins preserved, with a mould in hardened mud and a cast in hardened sand.

Some of the dolphin-like ichthyosaurs left records of their flesh and fins and even of their faces, marked with a spiral twist by the folds of their intestine, and containing undigested remains of the fossil squid-like creatures called belemnites; the very first known land beasts left footprints in the mud across which they lumbered; the bird-reptile archaeopteryx stamped its feathers with astonishing detail in the fine-grained lithographic limestone of Solenhofen.

But there are even older happy chances than these.

Some Devonian plants (II D) are so minutely petrified that we can study the precise shape of its microscopic hairs protruding from their leaves.

And recently Walcott has discovered a wonderful array of invertebrates imprinted on Middle Cambian shales (III A 2) nearly as clear to view as when they were swimming about, ages before the first fish, almost five hundred million years ago.

Horse, Marvellous Animal

He Typifies AMBITION

(Copyright, 1930)

A FALL, IN A GREAT STEEPLECHASE

THE greatest steeplechase in the world is the Grand National, run every year in England. The jumps are so high that a tall man cannot look over them, so wide that a horse landing on one may be hung up there.

This picture shows Becher's Brook, worst jump in the most difficult of all steeplechases. You see one of the falls, which are frequent in the Grand National, and wonder how a horse falling from that height, at terrific speed, landing on his neck, can avoid killing himself. This horse however, was not killed, nor was the jockey seriously injured.

The nature of this difficult steeplechase is shown in the fact that in the race where this fall occurred sixty-six horses started and only ten were able to finish. Fifty-six fell or were unable to go through.

For the Grand National "seasoned" horses are used. Young horses that, for money-making purposes, are used up and broken down in our American races never could cover the long, difficult Grand National course. That takes A REAL HORSE with age, muscle, strength and great courage. The race has been won by horses twelve years old, and older, beating younger horses.

It has been said that, among animals, each one represents some particular quality; the tiger, ferocity; the pig, gluttony; the dog, friendship, etc.

The horse represents AMBITION. He will go until he drops dead, and you never hear a sound of complaint.

The tiger snarls, the pig squeals, the dog whines,
The horse goes on until he drops, not a sound.
It takes a brave horse to attack the jump in this picture.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, March 22—A distinct change has come to the personnel of the first night theatrical audience in New York. For years it was as standardized as the seventh inning stretch. The same bored regulars drifted down aisles to the same pews night after night.

Today about the only constant regulars are first run critics and the aged and dapper corset manufacturer invariably in his aisle seat in the first row. Dyed-in-the-wool play devotees now wait for a show to be ironed out and become "set." They are fed up with annoying assininities.

The initial performance developed into a parade ground for show-offs who not only wanted to be seen but heard. They seemed to imagine that a patient audience came to see them and what they were wearing instead of the play.

* * *

DESPITE advertised warnings of prompt curtains, a first night continues to be from 20 minutes to a half-hour late. I have attended innumerable openings where not more than a dozen would be seated, despite the agonized wait, when the curtain was lifted.

Instead they would be in a huddle back of the rail indulging in a gabble so noisy that often players would be forced to halt in their lines until silence was restored. All during the first act they would saunter to seats, whispering and waving at acquaintances.

There was, too, invariably a sprinkling of those ermine-coated chatterboxes who pop out of their seats at intervals to gallop up and down the aisle greeting this new arrival and that. It was the worst mannered crowd one encountered in a city of bad manners.

AT intermissions the same confusions were repeated. Almost the entire audience moved out to promenade in the lobby and on the sidewalk. The curtain time bell was completely ignored and again they filtered back while players struggled for attention. And most of them are admitted on passes.

An excellent first night rebuke was administered by Keats Speed some years ago. He was seated behind two garrulous ladies, chatting almost out loud. Mr. Speed leaned over and observed in his soft Southern accents: "I'm sorry, ladies, but they are making so much noise on the stage I cannot hear you." And the looks he got!

I like the frankness of the friend of mine who broke a luncheon engagement with a lady with this telegram: "Can't see you today. Life will follow."

* * *

NEW YORK bushers are turning to moonshine in preference to dubious Scotch and cut rye. It is becoming a staple drink in bush huts at lower tariff. A moonshine highball is 50 cents to the 75-cent and $1 charges for the faked products. Bootleggers buy moonshine from Southern states for $15 a gallon. The sudden popularity is due to hunters from the city discovering they could consume moonshine without the customary headache that went with the local poison.

* * *

A speakeasy in the 40's has over its bar this amazing bit of true talk: "Our booze will not kill you, but it will not do you any particular good." And then there is kitten whiskey—one drink and you can't open your eyes for nine days.

* * *

Still another joint has gone literary. It offers a reprint to each customer of "Hot Afternoons Have Been in Montana" which won the Nation's poetry prize.

AN autographed picture from Oscar Wilde to his friend the late Edgar Saltus read: "Friendship is more tragic than love. It lasts longer."

Incidentally, Mr. Saltus at the time of his passing was writing what to my notion is the best named book of the generation. It was to have been called "Scaffolds and Altars."

"We are," postcards The Jolly Six of Spokane, Wash., "members of a fat man's club and our combined weight is more than 1300 pounds. And we read you daily."
